THE TILTON-BEECHER TRIAL.

A Flutter in Court.

NEW YORK, May 6.—A great flutter of excitement followed the calling of Henry C. Bowen as a witness in the Beecher-Tilton trial yesterday, and Bowen himself showed traces of considerable mental agitation. The first question, going to the impeachment of Beecher, was whether defendant ever did speak to him (Bowen), to influence him in discharging Tilton from his employment. After a short, sharp wrangle, the answer was given, "Never," and some sensation followed. Defendant's lawyers were all agog, Mrs. Beecher put her glasses on and took notes. Tilton was pale with anxiety. Moulton perspired profusely, and all hands were considerably waked up.

After witness had begun to relate his interview with Beecher the night the famous note was delivered, calling on him to abandon his pulpit, opinions began to grow confused, and for a moment the thought was uppermost in many minds that Bowen would turn out a witness for Beecher. Shortly after, witness contradicted Beecher's testimony in several points. He was asked if he received a letter from Beecher in January, 1871. I think it was the answer that revealed the caution of witness, for he then pulled out the letter in question, which proved to be the original draft of the Tripartite covenant. It was not a haphazard with witness. He had all the papers bearing on the case neatly folded, and promptly drew forth whichever one was called for. The defense contended that the award of $7,000 given to Tilton by Bowen, was extorted by a threat to publish the scandal. Bowen said that arbitration had nothing to do with Beecher's affairs. These affairs were mentioned neither in words nor in writing.

Pryor and Fullerton have been engaged during the past two or three days on requests to charge, which, it is said, will be very long.

NEW YORK, May 6.—The court room in which the scandal trial is proceeding was as full this morning as at any time almost when Tilton, Moulton or Beecher was on the stand. Defendant and wife were in their usual places in the van of the Plymouth church party. At a quarter past 11 o'clock

Henry C. Bowen

Took the witness chair and his examination was continued by Fullerton. He testified: I saw Beecher nearly every Sabbath prior to the 2d of December, 1870. Tilton and his affairs may have been the subject of conversation between us. On the 1st of January, 1871, I told Beecher of my intention to dismiss Tilton from my paper. I called at Beecher's house on the evening of that day and saw Beecher. At Deacon Freeland's saw Mrs. Beecher; her husband was not present. I did not reply to Beecher's letter of January 2d.

Fullerton read a passage from the letter and questioned witness as to the stories to which Beecher alluded.

Witness said Beecher said there were stories in circulation affecting Tilton's moral character. He told me of them, but I don't remember them. Beecher asked me if I was his friend. I told him I had no unfriendly feeling towards him. I did not say to Beecher that I would stand by him as a friend. These feelings remained throughout the interview and were not altered when I left.

Fullerton said that was all he had to ask the witness.

Evarts cross examined the witness. He handed him a letter and envelope and witness said: "I believe this is the letter and envelope I took to Beecher. It bears marks of having been opened and closed. I have no recollection whether it was opened or closed when I gave it to Beecher. This letter had been two or three hours in my possession when I delivered it. I got it from Tilton at my house. No person was present when it was given. There was an appointment at my house with Tilton that morning. It was made by Johnson and Tilton on the Saturday before. I think I told them I would be at home all that day and would see them when they desired. I remember they said they would call Monday morning. They came early in the forenoon, I think, before 11 o'clock, and may have stayed two hours or more. The topic of conversation was almost entirely that for which the interview was appointed. Johnson left before Tilton, at 12 o'clock, and Tilton a little later. I wrote a note to Deacon Freeland, but I have no copy of it. I do not believe I made a copy. I sent this note to Freeland immediately after the gentlemen left.—I think between 12 and 1 o'clock. I received a verbal answer a few moments after the messenger returned. I did not see Freeland or Beecher. The message was brought by the messenger, who was my son, John Elliott Bowen. It was 4 or 5 in the afternoon when I went to see Beecher; don't recollect if I saw any person at Deacon Freeland's house, except Beecher; have no recollection of seeing the servant who opened the door. Don't remember whether this interview was in gaslight or daylight. I occupied the front parlor. Freeland's family consisted of his wife and other members,—I cannot tell how many. The folding doors were closed when I went in; think I stayed about half an hour, or perhaps a little longer. Don't remember if, when I got there, there was any person awaiting me. Don't remember of any gentlemen waiting to see me as to my conversation with Beecher, nor do I remember conversation with a gentleman there. I went to see Beecher. Don't remember seeing Eggleston there. Eggleston was one of the co-editors of the Independent. I received a letter of January 2d from Beecher. I read it and kept it. Don't think it struck me that the letter contained a different version of the story of my interview with Beecher than really occurred.

Saturday, Dec. 3d, I told Tilton of my intention to terminate his connection with the Independent. Told Tilton of my intention with regard to the Union. I then left. Believe Tilton left after me. Don't remember seeing him at the Union office after that. Later in the day sent him a formal notice of his removal.

Witness handed Evarts two papers which he said were notices of the removal of Tilton from the Independent and Union, and which Evarts read in evidence.

Witness continued: Believe I received answers to those notes from Tilton, but am not certain. Have an impression I received some reply in writing. I was entirely solvent at the time, and have been so since. I have no recollection on the subject of admitting that I owed Tilton any remuneration for the cancelling of the contracts. I don't think Moulton left a power of attorney with me then.

Evarts read a receipt given witness by Tilton for a check for $7,000, and witness said this receipt was given by Tilton on the evening the arbitration was made, and the check was given him. About this time I was shown a proof of the Golden Age article, and I believed it was shown me by a person with whom I talked about the arbitration. Don't remember who it was. Think I named Claflin on the arbitration. Did not understand who Tilton named. Do not remember when I heard these arbitrators' names. Never before the evening of the arbitration did I see the Tripartite Agreement. It was after this I heard about it. I received the Woodstock letter two or three days after my settlement with Tilton. It is dated June 16, 1873. The letter was returned me after the settlement. I never asked for its return, nor did I expect it. It was a surprise to me when I received it. It was Claflin who brought me the tripartite agreement. It was left with me at my office, and was not immediately signed; I think next day. I cannot fix the day it was left with me. The paper which was left with me was changed, and after it was changed I signed it.

Shown a paper: This is not the paper which was left with me and signed next day. I cannot state how soon after the paper was signed by me the other parties signed. I was ignorant two or three days before the meeting of the arbitrators as to when they would meet. It was stated to me they would meet at Moulton's on the evening they did meet, April 3d. I can't say from whom I received notice, but think from one of the arbitrators. I went around to the meeting with Chas. Storrs. Don't remember who was there. Don't remember if Tilton or Moulton was there. For aught I know, when I got there with Storrs, there may have been parties there. When we assembled there we shook hands all around. This was in the back dining room, on the parlor floor. I cannot repeat what was said, nor have I any recollection of it. The arbitrators gathered about the table, and I asked what was to be submitted, and they said the difference between Tilton and myself, and I said that I would not go a step farther until the submission of the matter was made in writing. Moulton drew up a submission and Tilton and myself signed it. Tilton then submitted his case to the committee, claiming an amount, in substance claiming $7,000, and gave certain reasons for claiming that amount. He said that by the articles of contract he claimed about $7,000. At this moment I don't remember that he said anything else. I said to the arbitrators that in my view there was no legal claim on the Independent or Union, and that I would leave the whole matter with them. I don't remember saying there was no claim for any amount, but may have said there was no legal claim. After these statements we went into the front parlor, and left the arbitrators to themselves; Tilton and I went to the front room, and Moulton, I think, went up stairs. We were there about half an hour before the arbitrators announced their decision. The folding doors were then opened and we were invited to go back. The award was then announced, but I don't remember what was said or who announced the award. No statement was made by Claflin that all the papers were to be burned and the tripartite agreement signed. Nothing of this kind occurred. There was nothing said out of which this statement could occur. I remember the conversation, but it did not take place among all parties in the room. I don't remember of their separating into knots or groups in the room, though they may have done so. Claflin may have said this out of my hearing; but I don't think it was said in my presence. The arbitrators' room where the arbitration took place, was a large room, about 20 by 17, I should think.

Recess was here taken.

After recess Bowen's cross-examination continued. Witness was asked about the announcement of the award by the arbitrators, and said that it was no written award, and he didn't know who announced the award, nor could he give the language in which it was announced.

Evarts then read from the testimony of Claflin, who announced the award as follows: "I said we had made up our minds that they should first burn all papers connected with the scandal, and that Bowen should pay Tilton $7,000, and they should sign the covenant and tripartite agreement, as we called it.

Evarts—Did Claflin say that? Answer—I say not, most positively. (Sensation.)

Question—Did he say any part of it? Answer—No part of it whatever.

Question—Do you mean it as an entire falsification? Answer—No, sir, I do not.

Question—What do you mean? Answer—I have no recollection of any such statement being made.

Question—Ah, that's what you mean? Answer—I mean no such statement was made to me.

Question—Do you mean anything more than that you don't recollect any such statement? Answer—I mean that it would be impossible not to recollect it if it had been.

Question—That's a matter of judgment. Answer—Well, that's my judgment.

Question—It's your judgment that it would be impossible for you not to recollect it? Answer—I say no such statement was made to me. I say that most distinctly.

Question—Then this was made out of whole cloth? All of plaintiff's counsel—Ah! oh! oh! oh!

Question—So, far as the fact goes, from your recollection, nothing could have justified the statement? Answer—I am not the judge of this case. I decline.

Question—Your recollection? Answer—No such statement was made to me.

Question—Nothing of that kind? Answer—I have no recollection of hearing anything of the kind.

Question—Very well; now, have you any recollection that nothing of that kind was said? Answer—I have a recollection that nothing of that kind was said.

Question—Then, as far as you recollect, nothing occurred out of which that statement could be made? Answer—Nothing whatever.

Evarts read from Storrs and Claflin's testimony with relation to Bowen's asking for the Woodstock letter. Witness said nothing was said to him about this letter, and there was no conversation about it. He didn't get the letter until the next morning.

Witness was questioned about a certain interview with Dr. Eggleston, about which he was unable to remember much. He didn't remember telling Eggleston that he had a letter in his pocket from Tilton to Beecher. Didn't remember telling Eggleston to go and see a certain lady about something he told him and report to him the result. Didn't remember Eggleston's returning from the lady's with a message, and that he told him (Eggleston) that he had been to see Beecher, and that he was a good friend to both of them, and that Beecher said Mrs. T. was a saint on her way to heaven, and that he (Beecher) had said horrible things about Tilton. Witness would not swear, however, that this didn't occur.

Witness was questioned about the interview with Beecher at Freeland's when he delivered Tilton's note, and said he gave it to Beecher, who read it and put it in his pocket. Witness asked him what reply he had to make, and Beecher said "the man is crazy." He asked me if I was friendly to him, and I answered that I was not unfriendly. I went there with a friendly spirit, and so told him. He asked me if I knew anything about troubles in Tilton's family. I said I heard some things about him, but not about his family particularly. He said he or his wife had received some letters from the west from Mrs. Tilton, which he would like me to call and see the next morning. I was to call and see his wife. I said I did not care to call. Then I referred to matters between me and Mrs. Beecher, but he said he would make that all right, and I promised to go there next morning. After this we talked about Tilton. Some facts and names of women were mentioned, which were strange to me. I knew some names by reputation. I said I was aware there were damaging reports about Tilton in that relation. I only alluded to them in a general way, and told him some things I had heard. I said I had reasons which induced me to sever his connection with the paper, and said these stories told me by Beecher were new to me and a surprise to me, coming, as they did, after his removal. Beecher gave me no opinion about what I should do as I already had decided to remove Tilton. My mind was made up without Beecher, and he did not change it. Beecher urged me to come to his house and hear the contents of these letters or papers, and I believe this was all. I saw Mrs. Beecher next day and had about half an hour's interview with her. Don't think I saw Beecher. On New Year's day I made an ordinary call on him. I stated to him that on the previous Saturday I had severed Tilton's connection as correspondent of the Independent and editor of the Union. I was one of the founders of Plymouth church and am still connected with it.

Redirect examination—Witness said he didn't know what became of the draft of the tripartite agreement which he refused to sign, and didn't know where it was now. It was his recollection that the paper did not come to him until after the money was paid. He said that when he and Beecher and Tilton had settled their difficulties, he saw no reason why he, witness, should sign this paper. The original draft of the triparte agreement was shown witness, and identified by him as the one he refused to sign. He pointed out what portion he had refused to sign. Fullerton read the passages thus marked, together with those substituted therefor in the copy which Bowen signed. The words stricken out are as follows: "I declare that these charges, imputations and innuendoes, are without any foundation in fact, to the best of my knowledge and belief." What is substituted in the place of this, in lead pencil, is as follows, to-wit: "I sincerely regret having made any imputations, charges or innuendos unfavorable to the Christian character of Mr. Beecher." In another place witness said he struck out the word "disavow" and substituted "withdraw," but the former word still appeared in the paper as signed. He struck out after the words "I know nothing," the words, "derogatory to his reputation as a clergyman or man," and inserted the words, "which should prevent me from extending to him my most cordial friendship, confidence and Christian fellowship." Witness was asked if, at the time of the arbitration, he knew anything about the so-called letter of apology. He replied not that he remembered. He had no recollection whatever of knowing at the time of the arbitration, or at the time of the signing of the Tripartite agreement, of its existence, nor did he know at this time of the existence of Beecher's letter to Mrs. Tilton, beginning, "The blessing of God rest upon you," nor of the letter of Mrs. Morse to Mr. Beecher, dated February 5th, 1872, nor did he know at that time of the existence of any charge made by Mrs. Tilton against Beecher, nor of any retraction of such charge, nor recantation of such retraction. Witness was then asked what time of day on January 2d he informed Beecher he had discharged Tilton. He thought about 1:30 P. M., and it was after he received a letter from Beecher. Witness was asked if he at any time stated to Beecher any charges which implicated his moral character.

Evarts objected, and the court ruled out the question.

John N. Lought.

An employe at the Delmonico at that time, testified that there was no restaurant on the upper floor at the time. The colored witness (Wortley) testified to seeing Tilton and Mrs. Woodhull lunching together there.

The Union County Agricultural Society has chosen the following officers for the ensuing year: J. L. Caviness, R. J. Rogers, D. A. McAlister, directors; W. J. Snodgrass, secretary; A. Warnick, treasurer.

Sheriff Apperson of Clackamas county, has collected and paid to the county treasurer taxes to the amount of $33,343 91. There remains on the delinquent list the sum of $1,068 97. This is close collecting.

J. H. Foster is preparing to build a warehouse adjoining his mill property at Albany, with a storage capacity of 100,000 bushels. That, in conjunction with his present facilities will give storage room for 210,000 bushels.

The Eagle woolen mills, of Brownsville, were sold at auction the other day, by the sheriff, for something over $7,000. J. M. Moyer, and a few other Brownsville gentlemen, were the purchasers. The factory will be ran as heretofore, and the people get the benefit of a market for their wool.

Last Sunday night the school house in A. G. Marshall's district, some six miles east of Albany, was burned. There is no doubt but it was the work of an incendiary, and the utmost diligence should be employed in ferreting out the dastardly scoundrel, and meting out justice in its full measure. So says the Granger.

In addition to the officers mentioned heretofore as elected in Oregon City last Monday, the following were chosen: Councilmen, J. D. Miller, Peter Paquet, H. Cochran, C. N. Greenman, W. H. Pope, F. M. Albright and M. A. Stratton; Assessor and Collector, Jas. Milne; City Marshal, Ed. Hatch; City Attorney, H. E. Chamberlain.

Dan Burns, who was sentenced to pay a fine of $150 or 75 days in the county jail of Clackamas county, is serving out his time. John Joyce, who was to pay a fine of $300 or 150 days in jail, is also serving out the sentence of the court, not having liquidated the little assessment the judge made against him. Stewart paid his fine and costs, amounting to about $660, and departed in peace.

The Salem Statesman of Thursday says: "Mr. Frederick Ericson, who came from Portland the other day to work for Mr. A. J. Brown on the capitol, met with a painful accident yesterday afternoon. While putting in position one of the 800 pound girder plates, the edge of the iron came down in contact with his hand in such a manner as to split open the forefinger of his left hand."

A shooting affray occurred last week at Connor Creek, in Baker county, the particulars of which have not yet come to hand. Bob Parks had some difficulty with Matt. Reed, his brother-in-law, who had separated from his wife. The difficulty led to the shooting of Reed by Parks, one shot taking effect in the thigh. Whether the shots will prove fatal is not known. Parks left for parts unknown.

The Oregon City Enterprise says: "R. E. Stewart was tried last week in the circuit court for an assault with intent to commit rape. The jury found him guilty of a simple assault. The judge fined him $500 and costs, and it may be inferred from the severity of the penalty that the judge regarded him fully guilty as returned by the verdict of the jury. It was a very filthy case, and we trust that it will be a long time before a similar cause will be up in our courts."

A Coos Bay man, writing to the Farmer, says: "I have been in Oregon since 1853, and the most pleasant winter that I have known in the State is the one last passed on the Coquille river. The coldest day was on the 17th of January, on the morning of which the mercury was 26° above zero. March was the most disagreeable month, as it rained more or less nearly every day. April has been pleasant so far. The hills are green; the leaves of the trees putting out, the birds sing and wild flowers deck the fields and hillsides."

The Sentinel says it can be safely asserted that there will be more "prospecting" done this season for gold in Union county than any previous year. This result is brought about by two causes—first, the pinching hard times experienced by the people east of the Blue Mountains; and second, that it is positively known that there are many placers which will pay from two to four dollars a day, which wages were entirely too small to offer any inducements to miners of the earlier days; but in our present condition, financially, these mines will be worked. A company of men, at the head of which is R. Akley, of La Grande, have already commenced active operations on what is known as Dixie Flat, located a little west of north from La Grande, and distant about five miles. Five years it has been known that this spot was rich in gold, but to work it successfully has been the difficulty.

The San Francisco Assessment Frauds.

SAN FRANCISCO, May 6.—In the matter of the expose of Rosener's administration of the assessor's office, Edward Martin, of the Hibernia Bank, testified in the Rosener investigation that he had business at the assessor's office in 1873, and was asked by Rosener if he was not going to see him; Mr. Martin caught the meaning; said he supposed he would have to; gave Rosener a card with his initials on it, stating he would honor it for $500. The card was presented at the Hibernia Bank some time after by a strange man, and a check for the money, payable to bearer, handed over. Mr. Martin said there was no agreement as to what the money was given for. It was not understood that it was election expenses. When directly asked what he gave the money for, he said, "I paid the $500 just as you would give up your purse to a highwayman." He admitted, however, he gave the money to be in Rosener's good graces.

A resolution was then adopted appointing a committee to memorialize the next legislature to pass an act constituting the bishops a corporation for that purpose.

The convention then proceeded to the election of standing committees and board of missions.

The report of the treasurer was read, showing the finances to be in a prosperous condition, with a surplus in several funds.

Parties who lost goods on the ill-fated Ventura have placed their claims in the hands of Chase & Leach, who will commence suits for damages and loss.

Weather and Crops.

Foggy nights and cloudy mornings continue to the satisfaction of farmers. Hay is coming in quite lively and the quality is superior to last year.

A Desperado Terrified.

Gabriel Cuyo, murderer of Rogerson, came up for sentence yesterday, but he manifested or simulated symptoms of insanity to such an extent that sentence was postponed. He appears to be paralyzed with terror. His confederate, Alipas, exhibits no signs of perturbation whatever.

Another Railway.

SANTA BARBARA, May 6.—An important railroad meeting was held this afternoon. John P. Stearns, chairman, J. A. Johnson, secretary. After full deliberation it was voted to organize a railroad company and build a road to Lyons' station at least. A committee on organization was appointed, to report on Wednesday night. All were united and full of enthusiasm.

The weather is cloudy.

A NEW METHOD OF ILLUMINATION.

An ingenious system of lighting is suggested by the Scientific American as among the probabilities of the future. Given, say, a large hotel to be furnished with artificial light, the plan suggested is instead of having a network of gaspipes, leading to each room and to burners in each room, according to the present method, to have the light for the whole building generated in one place, say in the main ventilating shaft for utilizing the surplus heat. The distribution of the light would be effected by means of reflectors, each throwing into its appropriate tube a bundle of rays—made parallel by a lens—sufficiently intense to flood the room to which they were directed with a pure white radiance, which could be turned on or off, or graduated, by simply turning a knob or key. In size, the light tubes need be no larger than an ordinary gas pipes, and even much smaller, since all the light required for the largest room might be transmitted to the reflector as an extremely slender beam. The terminal lenses would close the tube against smoke and dust, which would dim the reflectors at the angles; and by keeping the inclosed air pure and dry, the absorption of light would be appreciable.

Says the editor of the Port Townsend Argus: "The rarest specimen of Indian ingenuity it has been our province to witness for some time was shown us on Thursday, at the Cosmopolitan hotel. It was made of slate rock, and intended for a flute or flageolet, highly ornamented with a bird resembling an eagle, his keen gaze fastened upon his prey—several frogs—below him, which are on the alert to escape, besides other ingenious devices. The ends of the instrument are embellished with metal of some kind, and altogether it was most elaborate in design and workmanship. It was purchased by Mr. Crane of the manufacturer and subsequently transferred to Judge Jacobs."

A REMARKABLE STORY.

A MAN BADLY WOUNDED LIVES TWO MONTHS ON RAW BEAR MEAT—RESCUED BY HIS FRIENDS WELL AND IN GOOD SPIRITS—SNOW AS A MEDICINAL AGENT.

[From the Virginia Chronicle, April 22d.]

About fifty miles from Virginia City, as the crow flies, is a little mountain vale known as Gravelly valley. In the summer season it is a beautiful spot, green and luxuriant, but it is snowed in during the winter. In February last two hunters, named H. M. Robinson and David Knox, were in the neighborhood looking for game. At night they camped in a small cabin, which had been used in former years by sheep herders. During the day they explored the surrounding mountains, looking for bear and deer. They succeeded in killing a large cinnamon bear, which they dragged to the hut. The steaks cut from its quarters served as an agreeable change from their usual diet of cured bacon and jerked venison. On the morning of February 15th, when twelve miles from camp, Robinson, in getting on his horse, accidentally discharged his gun and the ball, an ounce in weight, passed through his right heel.

SHATTERING IT TO FRAGMENTS.

His companion enveloped the wounds in blanket, and they started immediately for the cabin. Upon their arrival Knox saw at once that it was necessary to go for a physician. Robinson was weak from loss of blood, was unable to ride to the nearest settlement, a distance of forty miles, and the nature of his injury was such that he must surely die unless medical assistance was procured. It was probable that it would be judged necessary to amputate the limb to save his life. They were sworn friends; and Knox, after placing the wounded man in a bunk, covering him with a blanket and leaving him two day's provisions, bade him be of good cheer until his return. He rode all that night through a blinding storm, which set in soon after his departure, and arrived in Lake valley soon after daylight. The road passed over a high range of mountains which separates the two valleys. There was no cessation in the storm, but having procured the assistance of a physician who was well known to Robinson, they started to return. As they ascended the steep side of the mountain the determined men soon found that it was impossible to proceed further. The snow was already four or five feet deep, and was accumulating in great drifts. Half a dozen times their horses

FELL INTO DEEP RAVINES,

From which they were extricated with difficulty, and they were at last compelled to turn mournfully back for their own preservation. The regrets they felt at Robinson's fate were of no avail, but all through the winter his untimely end was discussed by his friends. About ten days ago, when the snow was pretty well off the ground a party of men thought it their duty to go over into the deserted valley and bury his body. They had also some curiosity to see whether he had left any account in writing of his approaching decease, and ascertain whether he supposed he had been abandoned without cause. He was a boon companion, liked by everybody, and had a host of friends. They crossed the mountain and came in sight of the spot where the disaster had occurred nearly two months before, with mournful feelings. They arrived at the door of the cabin and were alighting from their horses when a voice within was heard joyfully to exclaim: "Well, have you fellows got here at last?" and Robinson came limping out upon a pair of crutches. The amazement of the party may be imagined. Noticing their surprise he said: "You all thought I was dead, did you? I am not, but am as well as ever I was in my life, except this leg." And so it proved. He was aware that the storm which set in upon Knox's departure would prevent his return; and at once set to work to make the best of the situation. He kept his wound dressed with snow, and when his ready provisions were exhausted dragged himself to the carcass of the bear at the door of the cabin and cut off a slice with his butcher knife.

RAW BEAR MEAT

And water from a mountain stream, which ran near by, was all the sustenance he had for over seven weeks. This meager diet no doubt kept his foot from mortifying. The fever subsided, the inflammation went down, and it soon began to heal. With a wire which he tore off an old broom he probed the wound and drew out several pieces of the bone. He then made a pair of crutches and was able to get about without difficulty. He is a man of intelligence, but the only thing in the nature of literary matter he had was the half an old New York Tribune, which, as he lay upon his couch during his isolation, he perused until he said he believed he could repeat every word it contained, advertisements and all. He considers the snowstorm a lucky thing, and his leg would probably have been amputated had the physician arrived. Upon his return to Lake valley he was welcomed as one come back from the dead, and the affair is the great theme of conversation throughout the whole neighborhood.

PERILS OF THE SEA

THE SCHOONER "MARGARET CROCKARD" CAPSIZED. SEVENTEEN LIVES LOST.

One of the most fearful disasters that has ever occurred in connection with the commerce of this port is that of the loss of the schooner Margaret Crockard, on the voyage from Papeete to this port. The news was brought by the Marama, which arrived from Tahiti. The following is an extract from Capt. Godfrey's account of the disaster:

"Sailed from Papeete on February 22d, with Capt. Cottier (master) and crew of wrecked ship Airy Force and one passenger, twenty-three in all; on the following day (February 23d) at 8 P. M. had a few light squalls, on which all the light sails were taken in and stowed; and at 9 P. M. weather moderating and appearing settled, Captain went below and laid down, leaving deck in charge of Mr. Driscoll, the mate, with instructions to call him when his watch was out (midnight.) At half-past 11 Captain got up to go on deck, but before he had time to leave the cabin a squall struck the vessel and turned her bottom up almost instantly. Captain Cottier, master of the Airy Force, made his escape through the companion-way, and Captain Godfrey through the skylight; all others in cabin (four) perished, together with thirteen in the hold. The schooner had on board a spare boat, into which fourteen men (survivors of the entire crews of both vessels thirty-one all told), found themselves, almost before they were aware of the disaster. The boat belonging to the schooner was fast on deck, and so remained after the vessel capsized, and was never seen, after, neither any of the unfortunates who perished. The survivors were 130 miles north by east from Watohiva, toward which they started at daylight. They landed on the fourth day, only to meet with fresh disappointment, hunger and thirst. On the second day after landing a few green coconnuts were found, which gave a little nourishment. Finding themselves on an unabited island, Capt. Godfrey took seven men and started south in hopes of reaching Tahiti, or at least fall in with some passing vessel before all perished, and two days after starting he fell in with the schooner Island Belle, Capt. Smith who took them on board and started for Watohiva to rescue the remainder, which they succeeded in doing the following day. Thence they were all taken to Arrao, from which island they arrived at Papeete on March 22d, four days after leaving it.

The Margaret Crockard was a fine schooner of 169 tons, built at Coos Bay in 1871, and has been particularly unfortunate. On her first trip (if we mistake not) she was being towed out over Coos Bay bar, on April 18th, 1871, when she struck on the bar and capsized. She drifted out to sea. Subsequently the brig Hesperian fell in with the vessel, which was at this time right side up, put a crew on board, and in charge of Mr. Herd, mate of the Hesperian, who succeeded in getting her into this port, with both masts gone and the hull but slightly damaged. This last was her initial trip, and the one the subject of this item her final one, Captain Godfrey being unfortunate enough to be in command on both occasions. Her cargo of oranges, etc., was fully insured, and the vessel (valued at about $15,000) party insured.—Alta California.

SNOW BOUND.

HOW STORM LAKE BROLINSKA WAS USHERED INTO THE WORLD.

(Correspondence of the New York World.)

CHICAGO, April 4.—During the severe snowstorms of a couple of weeks since an exceedingly American occurrence was chronicled at Storm Lake, Iowa, a small city on the line of the Illinois Central Railroad, some eighty or one hundred miles east of Sioux City. On Friday night several Western bound trains, with several hundred passengers, were compelled to stop there till the relief trains could plough and shovel a way through the drifts extending thence to Sioux City. The two hotels were, of course, soon crowded. The residents then threw open their houses, and with American heartiness made all the storm-stayed passengers their guests.

On one train was a car of Mennonites from the south of Russia on their way to join the rest of the sect in Dakota. Unable to comprehend the invitations of the people of Storm Lake, the Russians refused to leave their car, where they passed the night. Next morning it was ascertained that in a bedroom improvised by tacking some sheets across the end of the car where the stove was, one of the Mennonite women named Brolinska was about to be confined. The simple Mennonites had, apparently, no idea of soliciting medical attendance or more suitable accommodation, but these of course, were supplied. Two doctors from Storm Lake and two others who were storm stayed, promptly volunteered their services, and under their auspices a possible President of the United States was successfully ushered into life. The ladies of the city, with the sympathy and curiosity of their sex, were not long in making their way to the car to inspect and aid, and thus in a very short space of time no inconsiderable excitement was caused in the crowd, whose members were all in unusual good humor and prepared to make the most of any sensation.

The Mayor announced a special meeting of the council, which declared the day a public holiday, voted the hospitalities of the city to the baby and its mother, appointing a committee to present the resolution, and invited the citizens to make a suitable demonstration. These, nothing loth, complied. A procession was organized, containing every vehicle, public or private, in the city, headed by the city marshal on horseback and a brass band drawn by six gray horses. Following these came, in carriages, the Mayor and Council, the Odd Fellows, the Freemasons, the Young Men's Christian Association and the church societies; then marched the fire department; the general public, afoot or in carriages, came next. The mother and baby were carried in triumph to the public hall, where, after prayer, speeches were made by the Mayor, Judge Jefferson, P. Kidder, Delegate to Congress from Dakota, and several prominent lawyers, merchants, etc., the concluding oration being delivered by Eph. Witcher, who brought back the first news from the Black Hills miners. The announcement was then made that a five-acre plot of land adjoining the city was given to the baby, the deed being already prepared and only needing to be filled in with his name. A poll was at once demanded, and some 230 of the 300 people present voting for that name, the boy was christened by popular acclamation Storm Lake Brolinska. The procession then reformed and escorted Master Brolinska and parents to the station, where a special engine and car awaited them, and bore them away to Sioux City amid cheering, ringing of bells, screeching of whistles, etc. All the flags and banners in the town were hoisted or hung out, bells were rung, firearms discharged, healths drank, the Storm Lake Pilot got out an extra containing a full report of the demonstration, and altogether the people treated themselves to a sort of wintry Fourth of July.

AN INGENIOUS ROBBERY.

A few days since, writes the Paris correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph, on March 26th, a sensational robbery was committed, of that bold but patient and thoughtful type which we are beginning to recognize as the American style. A. M. Delapierre, money changer on the Boulevard de la Madeleine, joins to this business a trade in expensive nick nacks. Nearly each day for the last six months an American has made small purchases in the shop. With the ease and volubility of his pleasant race, this gentleman had fallen into the habit of exchanging long gossips with M. Delapierre, who looked on him as one of his best customers. The other morning the American arrived as usual with a friend. M. Delapierre had just taken out a bag of money and valuables, which he placed in the window while he was talking. There is, of course, a money changer's grating between it and the shop. Presently entered a third person, who bought a silver teapot, which the assistant packed up and carried to the address given. When he had gone the American produced a claw, such as glass-globes are set upon, and said carelessly to the money-changer: "I wish you would see if you have a glass to fit this claw." M. Delapierre went with him into the back shop and sought a globe to match, leaving the friend alone. It appears that he immediately opened the grating, seized the little bag of valuables, and called out, "Haven't you found a glass yet?" The American came back, chose some articles to be sent home, and then went off quietly with his companion. Not for half an hour afterward did M. Delapierre discovered his loss, which amounted to £12,000, half of it in bank notes and gold, and the rest in checks and negotiable paper. A theft so patiently concocted, so audaciously carried out, is worthy of notice. Like our own bank forgers, these men had plainly some capital besides shrewd brain and cold resolution. They could afford to wait six months, and to buy silver teapots and trifles of that sort.

SENSIBLE ADVICE.

ROSEBURG, May 4, 1875.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

I see by yesterday's OREGONIAN that the Hon. Geo. A. LaDow has departed this life, causing a vacancy in the next Congress for Oregon. I suppose there are plenty of men, in the old political parties, that are ready to sacrifice themselves for their country's good, or more properly speaking, for their own good, although the office of Congressman elect seems to be rather an unhealthy office.

It may be thought to be rather early to begin to talk about a successor to Mr. LaDow, but the old saying is, "the early bird catches the worm"; and I think the Independents ought to be marshaling their forces ready for the coming conflict, as the Governor will undoubtedly issue his proclamation before long ordering a special election for the filling of said vacancy. I think the Independents ought to try their strength in the coming contest, and if we do not succeed in electing one of our own number, we will compel the two old parties to bring out their best men through fear of defeat by the Independents. The Independents are much stronger now than they were last June, and if proper care is taken in selecting a suitable man we can run the old politicians a very close race, if we do not succeed in gaining the election. To do so we will have to cast aside all past political prejudice, and all local feeling, let it emanate from what source it may. A continual trial of our strength is the way to show that we are acting up to the profession we make. Let us organize and be active, and see what we can do. Defeat in a good cause is better than success in an evil one.

His friends presented him a purse containing $75.

On Monday evening of last week the beautiful little schooner Cassie Howard was launched from the ways of the Messrs. Hall Brothers, at Port Ludlow. She is represented as a beautiful model, with a length of 110 feet, breadth of beam [illegible] feet, depth of hold 9½ feet, and registers about 200 tons. She is designed for the coast trade of California, and will be commanded by Captain Hayward, well known on this coast. The builders have another schooner on the stocks, making the eighth vessel since opening their yard at this point, to be launched in about a month, and have a contract to build two more three-masted schooners, to be finished this season.

The Echo says: "On Friday evening of last week, Debney Jones, who had ten years yet to serve on account of murder, and Andrew St. Martin, who was booked for two years' confinement in the jail at Olympia, were heard to make a wonderful noise at beating on a tin pan, as they had done a few evenings preceding this. The other inmates of the jail thought that these parties were simply having a good time, and hardly dreamed that an attempt was being made to free themselves from confinement. St. Martin managed to draw out and break a staple, used in constructing his bedstead, from the wall, and with it picked the lock of his own cell, and then broke the fastenings which held the door of Jones' cell. With a large bar of iron they managed to remove enough brick to enable them to take out the iron grating in one of the windows. This having been accomplished, the two prisoners made good their escape. It is supposed that they left the building at 1 or 2 o'clock Saturday morning. Their absence was discovered at 5 o'clock. A reward of $200 was immediately offered, and the sheriff and jailor instituted a search for the missing ones, but without gaining any knowledge of their whereabouts."

Right here, within the sound of the church bells, we have good land for from $25 to $100 per acre. Remember this is within 3 or 4 miles of the Metropolis of Oregon, where people wear store clothes, observe the Sabbath, ride on steamboats and railroads, have spelling schools, with a soil and climate not excelled for vegetables, fruits, cereals, hops, and "ingans," with a cash market, and no fear of drought, curculio, grasshoppers or crickets; no "Spanish grants" to rob you; where we have telegraphic communication with Europe, Asia, Africa and Plymouth Church; where ministers don't have to take summer vacations, for we've got a Brooklyn of our own, and where a Real Estate Agent is given a "wide berth." Yes, if this suits you, and you want to raise fruits and vegetables, and chickens, and make butter, and WORK, we can fill the bill. REHABILITATION—HOW?

In yesterday's Bulletin appeared an article, transcribed from the Statesman, on the subject of the "Rehabilitation of the Republican party," which deserves something more than a passing notice, not alone on account of its subject matter, but for its manner of discussing the subject. Unlike what we have been accustomed to see in the partisan organs, this article treats with civility those Republicans who have withheld their support from the party organization under its recent management in this State. It even goes so far as to condemn by the plainest implication the action of the ring in forcing through the Albany convention the resolution whitewashing Senator Hipple, which so disgusted the Republicans of the State that only about 45 per cent. of them voted for the nominee of that convention, notwithstanding he was a good man, and by no means unpopular. We say, that by the plainest implication that the performance is condemned. Here is what the Statesman says, the italics being ours:

> In the pending campaign there will be no occasion for the Republican party's carrying ... unpopularity, or for being ... indulgent of any one, save the people; and in the very outset, ... management of ... submit to it any longer. I ... like the Republicanism of ... the party papers ... we have been ... that the "small ... people to have a ... their candidates, ... t required to en... those whose vicious ... them to the necessity ... on the party, there ... division.

And then the Statesman tells what the Republicans want, in this wise:

> Give them a popular nomination on square national Republican principles and utterly divested of all extraneous influences, personal, corporate or official, and they will elect a Congressman by at least 1,000 majority, and will then enter into the national campaign, with the prestige of organization and success; and under other conditions it will not be worth while to make a nomination at all.

And again:

> In the future campaigns we shall suffer ourselves to be embarrassed by no accountabilities which do not belong to Republican party principles and the individuality of the candidates before the people; hence we shall most urgently ask those citizens who shall compose the congressional nominating convention to give us a candidate without personal reproach, of commanding ability, and in all respects in correspondence with the enlightened and patriotic people whom he is expected to represent.

It is pleasant to be able to read such sensible advice and admonition as this in the party organs. True, it comes a little late, and under circumstances which might suggest that the change of tone is explained by that closing sentence in the last but one of the above excerpts, where it is said that unless the party can present a united front "it will not be worth while to make a nomination at all;" and that is hardly so grateful a thought as it would be to ascribe the change entirely to an awakening of the slumbering consciences of the organs of the party. Still, we are not unwilling to believe in the saving power of death-bed repentance—sometimes.

In the main argument advanced by the Statesman for an immediate reuniting of all who believe in Republican principles, we confess we can see but little force, though it is one almost always urged on such occasions. It is, briefly stated, that the Republicans must carry this special election for Congressman, in order that they may be able to carry the State at the next Presidential election. There is, to our mind, nothing in that idea. The two events are utterly unconnected. The influence of the preceding election over the succeeding one is generally more imaginary than real, except in cases where the preceding one places patronage or other means of political power in the hands of the successful party. This election will do nothing of the kind. The House of Representatives is overwhelmingly Democratic, and the Oregon election will make no difference. The Republicans of Oregon, of all wings and classes, will, we think it safe to assume, vote for the Republican candidate for President, and they will do that just as unanimously after voting for different candidates for Congress this fall.

It seems to us these papers that discourse with so much ease of reuniting the party, proceed on the assumption that the differences are merely personal quarrels, and that all that is necessary to perfect the process of "rehabilitation" is for those who have said hard things about each other to get together and shake hands, with or without personal explanations and apologies. The trouble lies deeper than that. The personal differences are of trifling importance. A man who will allow his private quarrels to control his public acts is not fit to be trusted in office or in party, and if that were all the trouble in the Republican organization the remedy would be the simplest thing in the world—just ordering all those who hung on to their quarrels to take a back seat, where they could cut each other's throats at their own sweet wills, without disturbing the harmony of the party. But the difference is over questions of party policy, of political practices, of modes of action; it is a vital difference. A "rehabilitation" that does not replace the fraudulent practices of late years with the fair and honest management of the early days of the party; that does not return to the old policy of making personal integrity and private virtue the primary qualifications for public office; that contemplates silencing criticism of the conduct of the party managers and the officers it appoints, whenever such conduct deserves criticism; that precludes exposure of corruption or official malfeasance of Republicans the same as Democrats; in short, any rehabilitation that does not come back to the old landmarks of Republicanism, as established by the founders of the party before its success had attracted to its banners all the unprincipled politicians of the old corrupt Democracy, is an impossibility; and, were it possible, its success would be a public calamity. Independents, both Republican and Democratic, were led to the course they have taken by a deep and thorough conviction that by that means, and by that alone, was it possible to put a stop to vicious practices which all admit had crept into the old party organizations, and which were sapping the very foundations of civil society and social purity. That they have already accomplished some good, few probably will deny, though there will be differences as to the amount or extent of the good results. And now they are not likely to give up all effort till they can see some reasonable ground to hope that the professions by the party leaders of unselfish devotion to the public good are not to be utterly disregarded and repudiated in the political workings of the party organization.

Again expressing our appreciation of the spirit of candor in which the Statesman treats the subject, and desiring to be equally fair ourselves, we submit whether any sufficient reason has been given by that paper why Independents should go back into their old party organizations and help to restore the reign of partyism, now happily almost entirely overthrown.

THAT "ANTI-MONOPOLY" TELEGRAPH.

Anybody who is the least bit sceptical as to the truth of the Bulletin's oft-repeated praises of the Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company as the enemy of monopolies can settle his doubts and satisfy his the list of directors of the company just chosen. They are: Oliver Ames, Elisha Atkins, S. L. M. Barlow, Benj. F. Bates, F. Gordon Dexter, Sidney Dillon, G. M. Dodge, Thomas T. Eckert, William H. Guion, Jay Gould, C. P. Huntington, S. Mills, J. W. Mortimer, C. J. Osborne, G. G. Sampson, James G. Smith, E. D. L. Sweet, W. J. Syms and Henry M. Taber.

It must be very assuring to the grangers and other classes who have suffered so much oppression from the transportation monopolies, to see such doughty enemies of all monopoly coming to the front as Jay Gould, C. P. Huntington, Henry M. Taber, Gordon Dexter, Sidney Dillon, G. M. Dodge, Oliver Ames, S. L. M. Barlow, William H. Guion, etc. It is true these are every one names that have been long associated in the public mind with whatever is odious in railway and steamship monopolies, and some of them have been synonyms for whatever words express the most disreputable features of the stock-gambling by which poor people are robbed to make rich people richer. It is true there is about some of these names an odor, not of Eden but of Erie, so pungent that one instinctively puts his hand to his nose at the bare mention of them. It is true that these are the same men whose combination to put up the rates of freight on the people of this coast, from fifty to one hundred and fifty per cent., has but just now been the most exciting subject of discussion in commercial circles. It is true that these are the men who have persistently and consistently opposed every scheme for a railway to Oregon which contemplated the breaking up the monopoly of transportation across the continent. It is true, in short, that these are now the men who have become princes and kings in wealth by grinding the faces of the producers through transportation monopolies, who now clothe themselves in purple and fine linen and fare sumptuously every day in their marble mansions, their steam yachts, and their palace cars. But this signifies nothing. General appearances may seem to indicate that such men are hardly to be relied upon with the most implicit trust as champions of the people against oppressive monopolies; but the appearances, not the men, are unreliable. For what would such men go into the directory of the one wire telegraph if not to slay the Western Union monopoly? Why, that is the main business of the Atlantic and Pacific concern. Its own people publicly avow that it is down on monopolies, and that ought certainly to be satisfactory proof of the fact. No, these men have been misunderstood—misrepresented. The Erie stock-jobbers, the Central Pacific sharpers, the Pacific Mail corruptionists, have been wronged by a malicious popular press and an ungrateful popular sentiment. The gold gamblers are the properest people in the world. Black Friday is an historical myth, and all the stories with relation to the infamous practices embraced within the definition of the newly-coined word Jaygouldism are cunningly devised fables. For, if such were not the case, how could these men get elected directors of the anti-monopoly telegraph company, the company which, we repeat, has time and again publicly declared itself the uncompromising enemy of monopolies, just as the Portland Bulletin, its mouthpiece here, has done? The thing would be impossible. That they are elected directors ought, therefore, to be satisfactory; but there is another circumstance proving, in exactly the same way, that the company is entirely free from the manipulation of monopolists; and that is, that every one of these distinguished anti-monopolists and models of business integrity, candor and fair dealing, was elected unanimously. That clinches the matter. The Atlantic and Pacific Telegraph Company is in no way under the dictation of the monopolists' rings; of course, it isn't. It is as free and independent of them as the Portland Bulletin itself.

What our correspondent from Roseburg says about the proper course for the Independents to pursue in the approaching special election, is in accordance with the views of every Independent voter we have heard express himself. No one thinks of anything but that there will be an Independent candidate, and his chance of election, if wisely selected, we think, will be by no means the poorest in the race. It will be a race between men more than between parties.

A man named Doggatt, after advertising his his wife in the Hartford Times, bursts into poetry as follows:

> "Happy day, when I got home,
> Happy day, and found her gone!"

It was reported that Henry Stricher, of Union county, had lost during the last winter a large number of cattle. It is not correct. Out of his large band of several hundred, he lost less than twenty head—and from causes other than want of feed.

SAN DIEGO, (Cal.) April 29.—A letter has been received from Mexico, stating that the Commission ordered by the Mexican Government to settle land titles in Lower California, has been indefinitely postponed.

BIENNIAL SESSION OF THE AMERICAN POMOLOGICAL SOCIETY.

TO THE EDITOR OF THE OREGONIAN:

As we deem fruit raising in Oregon just in its infancy, and that our fruits are destined to be one of the great staple productions of the State, we wish to call the attention of those of our citizens who are chiefly engaged in this industry to the importance of having our fruit fully represented by an actual exhibition and test of its quality by comparison with the fruit of other localities, at the meeting of the American Pomological Society next Fall, as well as at the World's Exposition of 1876.

By a letter just received from Hon. Marshall P. Wilder, President of the American Pomological Society, we are advised that the society will hold its next biennial session in Chicago, commencing September 10th, and to continue for three days. We are also informed that the society has voted to participate in the International Exhibition to be held in Philadelphia in 1876, and that the second day of the meeting will be chiefly devoted to making arrangements and suitable preparations for this great work.

Would it not pay the fruit growers of Oregon to send one of their number to this meeting, and thereby secure the co-operation of other States in advancing the interest of this great industry, as well as to understand the uniform system of rules and regulations to be adopted by the society for the exhibition of fruits in 1876. If Oregon can excel in any of her productions, it will be in her fruit and cereals, and we are confident if proper effort is made she will be in these articles, at least, a successful competitor in the grand show. But it will require a sacrifice of time and means to accomplish this desirable end, and the work should be immediately commenced by our fruit-growers taking active measures to send one of their number with September, and thereby secure the influence and assistance of the Society in our exhibit of fruits in 1876. But there are other benefits that fruit-growers of Oregon would derive from attending the meeting of the Pomological Society next fall that would more than compensate them for the necessary expense and time. They will there meet and hear the report of the most scientific and practical pomologists on the continent, who have given the study of the cause of disease in fruit and fruit trees their lifelong attention, and can suggest remedies and improvements that would be of incalculable benefit to the fruit growing interests of our State.

Among other important subjects to be reported on, is "the cause of the rotten root in apple trees," by W. C. Flagg; "theory and practice of pruning," by William Saunders; "root pruning and how to grow the fairest fruit," by E. S. Hull; "fruit disease, fungi on fruit, cause and result, by Thomas Mehan." These and many other kindred subjects cannot fail to be of great benefit to the fruit-growing interest of our State, and should be a sufficient inducement to those engaged in this industry to have Oregon properly represented with other States on all such important occasions. As a member of the general fruit committee for our State, it will be impossible for me to attend this meeting, and I earnestly solicit our fruit men to designate one of their number who is more competent and who can give their time and attention to the work.

All reports on the varieties of fruit best adapted to the soil and climate of this State should be addressed to W. C. Flagg, Secretary American Pomological Society, Moro, Ill.

Packages of fruit, with the names of the contributors, should be addressed, "American Pomological Society, care of O. B. Galusha, Chicago.

CITY.

WHAT MAY BE.—In speaking of our city and its possibilities the Silver City Avalanche says Portland, Oregon, is nearly a thousand miles nearer to China than San Francisco is. In case of the building of the Portland Dalles and Salt Lake Railroad the Oregon commercial capitol would be a formidable rival of San Francisco for the East India trade. This fact with the value of numerous other connections in different directions the great resources of the country through which the road will pass and the desirable grade render it certain that the line would be one of the best paying in the country

AN IRREVERENT CHARGE.—During the reports of the various missionaries at the meeting of the Presbytery of Oregon a rather amusing revelation occurred. One of the elders hinted at the necessity of a Presbyterial injunction being laid upon his pastor to deter him from riding a fractious horse. He (the pastor) had been thrown five times, kicked three times, and otherwise abused by the animal. The pastor replied that the horse was a part of his salary and that it was necessary to ride him in order to get the worth of his money

RAFTING.—The dangerous practice of riding on a frail craft on the lakes north and south of the city is indulged in to a considerable extent by our youth. These adventurous youths moor their boats at the shore secure a load of boys, then start for the deep water. They show but little seamanship in their management, and it is a wonder some have not yet been drowned. Parents who live near the water, especially at the present height, should warn and watch their children

AMUSEMENTS.

Madame Phelps and troupe will appear at the New Market Theater on the 14th and 15th. We have already mentioned the fact that they would be here shortly

We learn that it is the intention of the theatrical people in the city to give Mr R C White who has been employed at the New Market theater ever since it opened a grand benefit at that place on Wednesday night of next week, on which occasion a new piece never put on any stage before, will be presented

A letter from Mr Leigh S Lynch, received yesterday, informs us that that gentleman and Mr M Greenwall, whom our readers will remember as manager of Maguire's Minstrels in this city last year, have engaged the Lingard troupe now at Maguire's Opera House, San Francisco, to come to Oregon. The company consist of Wm Horace Lingard Miss Dickie Lingard, Alice Dunning Lingard and others all of whom are too well known to require any extended mention. The troupe will leave for this port on the next steamer, and are expected to arrive in season to open the New Market Theater on or about the 17th inst

The benefit tendered Mrs Fulford last evening at the New Market theater was attended by an audience which, in point of numbers and intelligence, testified the appreciation in which that lady is held by the theater going people of Portland. The hall was well filled, and in all respects the presentation of the piece chosen for the occasion, the "New Magdalen," a dramatization of one of Wilkie Collins' best novels, was highly satisfactory to the audience, who manifested their appreciation by repeated plaudits. There was no dragging, and the smoothness with which the play passed off being one of the pleasing incidents of the evening. All did well, and we have no need to commend the efforts of the performers, whose abilities our readers understand so well. The entertainment concluded with a musical selection rendered in excellent style by the Amphion Glee club

Mr. Frank Gilder, the popular pianist, will give his first concert this evening at Masonic Hall. Mr Gilder was here nearly two years ago with Madame Anna Bishop, and his success was very good as our readers will recollect. Mr Gilder has given within one year 25 grand concerts in San Francisco to crowded and enthusiastic audiences—a success never before achieved by any pianist who ever visited the Pacific coast. He will introduce at his concerts here a number of his solos that have never been performed here by him. Mr Gilder returns East this summer and these concerts will undoubtedly be his final appearance in our midst. He will be assisted by Madame Eugenie Babcox the brilliant soprano vocalist, who is well known in San Francisco as having a soprano voice of great altitude, and flexibility. Madame Babcox was selected by the late Prof Mulder Fabbri to assume the role of "Queen" in the opera of the "Magic Flute" given by him in Platt's Hall for two successive nights last May. Very few living sopranos can sing high enough to take this part of the opera, as it carries the voice to F in alt. Madame Babcox also appeared at the celebrated Fabbri High Art concerts given last season in San Francisco. Mr Thos Whiffin and Miss Blanche Galton complete the array of musical talent

PERSONAL.

We are gratified to state that Colonel J W Nesmith has recovered from his recent severe illness

Spelling matches are all the rage now and there is no telling what may follow to occupy the attention of society. A TERRIBLE EXPLOSION!

Bursting of the Boiler of the Steamer "Senator"

SIX MEN KILLED AND SEVEN INJURED—FULL PARTICULARS OF THE FEARFUL CATASTROPHE

At 15 minutes to 6 o clock yesterday afternoon a terrific explosion which shook the foundation of every building in Portland startled our citizens. With the first shock it was thought the noise came from a steamer gun or possibly from a touch of an earthquake but the painful truth became apparent an instant later. The noise came from the vicinity of the foot of Morrison street and looking in that direction a few seconds after the explosion took place, a column of snow white steam could be seen curling heavenward, through which was dimly discerned the shattered fragments of what might have been a building of some description. In less time than it requires to write, the huge volume of steam and smoke had lifted itself revealing the shattered and dismantled cabin of a steamer. One glance and the fearful story was told. It was one of those frightful catastrophes of which we often read but are seldom called upon to witness or chronicle—a steamboat explosion. Aroused by the tremendous noise and shock every person looked wildly around to discover the cause. The exclamation of all was "What is that?" Those who were upon the street and along the wharves glanced in the direction from whence came the noise and with the rapidity of electricity the words ran from mouth to mouth "a steamboat has blown up." Hundreds of citizens came pouring out of the houses and, seeing the crowds pressing frantically up the streets joined the throng. Within two minutes from the time of the explosion three or four thousand persons were hurrying towards the scene of the catastrophe. To attempt to describe the wild excitement which prevailed would be vain. The wharves were jammed with a mass of humanity—men, women and children—surging to and fro some shouting, some crying, and all wrought up to a pitch of frenzy. A more thoroughly demoralized crowd we have never seen. As soon as the cloud of steam and smoke had lifted away it was discovered that the boiler of the

STEAMER SENATOR

Had exploded. Shortly before 6 o clock the Oregon Steamship Company's boat Senator left her mooring at the O S S Co's dock and steamed up past the city front. When opposite the foot of Alder street the boat was observed to slacken her speed and begin to round to. The steamer Vancouver was lying at the upper end of the W R F Co's wharf and the Senator began to swing so as to come alongside, as the former boat had on board a quantity of freight which was to be transferred to the latter. The wheel of the Senator had ceased to revolve and the pilot had turned his helm so as to allow the stern to swing around when with the rapidity of lightning came the dreadful crash. In the twinkling of an eye, the whole cabin, from the pilot house back to the hog post was torn away and the shivered fragments scattered far and wide in all directions

THE SCENE

Following the explosion was fearful to contemplate. The pilot house was blown about 75 feet up in the air, and fell a long distance out in the stream. Fragments of the cabin and portions of the ruptured boiler were hurled in mid air and fell in all directions. The surface of the river for a long distance was covered with the floating wreck. Several persons were seen struggling in the water and clinging with desperation to the fragments. The Vancouver was immediately loosened from the dock and came alongside the disabled and rapidly sinking vessel. There were on board probably 20 passengers or more at the time. Fortunately these persons were standing in the rear part of the cabin and escaped comparatively uninjured. It was but the work of a few minutes to transfer all the passengers from the Senator to the Vancouver. After the explosion, the Senator drifted down stream with her head toward the wharves. Meanwhile a number of small boats manned by resolute fellows, shot out from the wharves and the work of rescuing the injured persons was commenced. Quite a number who were thrown out into the water were picked up and saved from drowning. After those who could be seen were gathered up the men in the small boats began to pick up the freight which was floating about

THE WRECKED STEAMER

Continued to drift down the river partially submerged, until reaching a point opposite the east side depot, when she was drawn up and beached at a shallow place at the upper end. For some reason the steamer would not sink probably buoyed up by several air tight compartments. The rear end of the steamer sunk until the guards was completely buried but the forward portion remained above water

THE EXPLOSION,

As near as can be ascertained, was occasioned in the following manner. Just before leaving the O S S Co's dock, the engineer, Mr J Smith, set the pumps in motion. There was about 75 pounds of steam in the boiler, and the fire was very hot in the furnace. At the hour mentioned the boat pushed off, and started up the river. Meantime the pumps were in motion and the engineer supposed they were forcing water in the boiler. But it seems that through some defect in the suction the pumps failed to work. When the boat reached the foot of Alder street, and the engineer shut off the steam it is thought the pumps began to force water into the boiler. The water in the boiler was quite low and the crown plate and tubes were red hot. Instantly the cold water came in contact with the boiler the quantity of steam generated could not be carried off and the pressure could not be resisted and hence the explosion. Not a vestige of the boiler remained except the front end of the fire box which was blown forward. The cylinder of the boiler was shivered into atoms and the forward part of the cabin torn away

THOSE KILLED

At present writing it is a difficult matter to determine the exact number of persons who lost their lives by reason of this terrible catastrophe. As near as could possibly be ascertained the number of killed or missing is six. Captain Daniel McGill J D Locey the purser George Warner the fireman, James Smith John Cosgrove and John Crowley. The three last mentioned were deck hands

Captain McGill was at the wheel when the explosion occurred. The pilot house was blown into fragments and scattered far and wide over the waters. Persons state that they observed a man who was blown high in the air fall some distance away from the wreck and that after the person reached the water he was seen to struggle for a moment as if endeavoring to cling to some fragment of the wreck and then sink from sight. There can be but little doubt that it was poor old Captain Dan as not the slightest trace has been discovered of him since the explosion. Subsequently the pilot wheel was recovered but nearly half of it was blown away. Under such circumstances there would be little chance for a man who was holding to it. Capt McGill had resided for many years at Oregon City. He had been engaged for a long time in steamboating and is well known in Portland. He was a steady quiet man to be trusted under all circumstances and had many friends. A wife and one child survive him

Mr J D Locey, the purser, was in his office when the explosion occurred. The office was immediately above the boiler and within a few feet of it. Nothing has been seen of him and there can be no doubt that he was instantly killed and blown into the river and the body has sunk. Mr Locey was also a resident of Oregon City. He leaves no family, we believe

Geo Warner the fireman was standing in front of the furnace at the instant of the explosion. The whole front end of the fire box was blown over doubtless mangling and scalding him fearfully. The body no doubt is still in the hold but up to present writing it has not been extricated. Deceased was a young man who was universally esteemed. He has a mother and father residing in this city whose agonizing grief over the dreadful event can well be imagined

James Smith adeckhand who was engaged in putting wood down in the hold has been missed and there is every reason to believe he was killed or drowned

John Cosgrove, a deckhand has likewise been missed. He was standing on the forward deck handing down wood. Supposed to be killed outright or badly injured and drowned

John Crowley a deck hand was down in the hold stacking the wood away when the boiler burst. As the front end of the fire box was blown over, every avenue of escape was cut off and he was drowned beyond all doubt. He was seen by a man named Lyons sitting down with the water up to his waist but unable to escape his inevitable fate

At present writing not a single body of those who are among the victims has been recovered. Efforts will be renewed to day to recover the bodies of those killed

THOSE INJURED

The following persons were injured by the explosion

Charles Lyons a deck hand was slightly injured on one side of his face caused by a fragment of the fire-box striking him as it was blown over. He narrowly escaped instant death. The end of the fire box came over just grazing his cheek but leaving sufficient space for breathing. [illegible] He managed to reach the deck in time to escape death by drowning

Edward Coakley a deck hand severely injured. He was standing on the forward deck and received a heavy blow on a piece of timber fracturing several of his ribs and inflicting other injuries of a slight character about the head and face

John Leary the mate escaped with slight injuries

Charles Grant a deck hand sustained serious injuries. His shoulder blade is fractured and injuries were sustained in the region of the abdomen

O Wood a deck hand was slightly injured

Mr Felix Evans an engineer was standing in the pilot house talking with Capt McGill at the time. He was blown some distance into the river but fortunately was picked up by a small boat. His injuries are of a severe nature. One arm is broken and his head and face received several gashes. Other portions of his body are considerably bruised

John Williamson a deck hand had his right hand considerably injured from steam

Grit Jones the steward was seriously injured. He was not cut bruised or scalded but the shock to his nervous system was so intense that it is doubtful whether he will survive it

ALL THE WOUNDED

Were provided for at once. Two were taken to the Clarendon Hotel rendered as comfortable as possible and medical aid summoned. Mr W I Halsey, proprietor of the Clarendon generously gave orders to bring all those injured to that hotel and promised that they should be tenderly cared for free of cost. Those who were not taken to the Clarendon were distributed about the city and we can assure all their friends here and elsewhere that they are well provided for and everything which can contribute to their comfort and ease is being done

INCIDENTS

A little girl daughter of a Mrs Holmes aged about 9 years was sitting on a box of goods when the explosion occurred. She was thrown some distance out into the water along with the box. Fortunately the little girl's presence of mind did not desert her and on finding herself in the river she clung desperately to the box and finally crawled up on top of it when she was soon rescued by a small boat. Her mother was taken ashore along with three children having escaped injury. When she reached the wharf Mrs Holmes discovered one of her children was missing and supposing that it was lost swooned away. However the mother was overjoyed when the missing one was restored to her in the manner we have mentioned

A Chinaman was pulled out of the wreck by Capt Peter Mackie of the steamship J L Stephens some time after the Senator was beached on the eastern shore. Strange to relate, he was not injured at all—only wet and terribly scared

Great credit is due Capt Wm Troup of the steamer Vancouver for the coolness and presence of mind displayed by him in rescuing the passengers. Had not the Vancouver been near at hand and rendered valuable assistance the list of victims would have been much larger

Mr LaChapelle proprietor of the boat house is deserving of special mention for his gallant efforts to save life and property. He was out for some time with a number of his boats and rendered all the assistance within his power

We cannot omit to mention in complimentary terms the prompt and timely assistance rendered by many of our citizens and the crews of several of the vessels in port who with the aid of small boats saved several valuable lives and considerable freight

There was on board at the time about 75 tons of freight bound for points up the river. Of that amount not one sixth was recovered

THE SENATOR

Was built at Milwaukie in the year 1864 by the People's Transportation Company. A few years ago the hull was almost entirely rebuilt. The boiler was built at San Francisco in 1857. On the 13th of last October the hull and boiler were inspected by Capt Flanders and James Lotan and both were found in good condition. The boiler considering its age, was regarded as very strong and perfectly safe. When last inspected the boiler was allowed to carry 100 pounds of steam

This is one of the most destructive steamboat explosions which has ever occurred in the history of the State. As may well be imagined the frightful casualty has created a most intense excitement among our citizens. In our next issue we hope to be able to furnish additional particulars of the catastrophe

AUNT TABITHA.

BY OLIVER WENDELL HOLMES.

Whatever I do and whatever I say,
Aunt Tabitha tells me that isn't the way;
When she was a girl (forty Summers ago)
Aunt Tabitha tells me she didn't do so.

Dear Aunt, if I only would take her advice—
But I like my own way, and I think it so nice!
And besides, I forget half the things I am told;
But they will all come back to me when I am old.

If a youth passes by, it may happen, no doubt,
He may chance to look in as I chance to look out;
She would never endure an impertinent stare—
It is horrid, she says, and I mustn't sit there.

A walk in the moonlight has pleasure I own,
But it isn't quite safe to be walking alone;
So I take a lad's arm—just for safety you know—
But Aunt Tabitha tells me they didn't do so.

How wicked we are, and how good they were then!
They kept at arm's length those detestable men;
What an era of virtue she lived in—but stay—
Were the men all such rogues in Aunt Tabitha's day?

If the men were so wicked, I'll ask my papa,
How he dared to propose to my darling mamma?
Was he like the rest of them? Goodness who knows?
And what shall I say, if a wretch should propose?

I am thinking if Aunt knew so little of sin,
What a wonder Aunt Tabitha's aunt must have been:
And her great grand aunt—it scares me—how shockingly sad,
That we girls of to-day are so frightfully bad.

A martyr can save us, and nothing else can;
Let me perish—to rescue some wretched young man;
Though when a victim to the altar I go,
Aunt Tabitha'll tell me she never did so.

SPAIN'S CRUEL SPORT.

A BULL FIGHT AT MADRID.

After the procession of the performers across the ring to salute the President and obtain his permission to begin, a trumpet sounded and the doors of the bull-pen were opened in such a way as to make a passage to the arena. A few seconds' breathless suspense, and a bull came dashing through the opening into the sunlight—a large, magnificently-built animal, with long, sharp-pointed horns, and massive shoulders. The immense noisy audience and the glare of light seemed to daze him for a moment, and he stood motionless; then, catching sight of a performer on foot—a chulo, so-called—he turned and made for him, with head lowered, only to find him disappear. Half way up the inner wall of the arena is a ridge, and the nimble fellows only need to reach the wall to have an easy scramble to its safe side. There were more than a dozen aggressors in the ring with the bull; the chulos, unarmed, save with a red cloth, and two picadors on horseback, with lances, and having their garments heavily padded. Never was anything so far removed from the chivalrous knight of romance on his noble steed as these clumsy picadors on their blindfolded hacks. We had been to see the horses before the performance began, and the sight was so touching as almost to bring tears to the eyes. They are horses whose bones would have been laid to rest with the help of a bullet long before in any country but Spain; beasts whose ribs stood out on their shrunken bodies like laths on an unplastered wall, with knees like the ill-shaped excrescences on an aged tree trunk, and heads their poor lank necks could hardly sustain. Still they could stand up, and this was all that was necessary to their meeting with a bull, their greatest virtue being that they were absolutely valueless for everything else, and consequently it cost nothing to let a bull gore them as he liked. The bull had hardly recovered from his surprise at missing the chulo he had chased before the red flag waved by another caught his eye, and instantly we saw him racing after this second one with exactly the same result. Meanwhile a picador had been walking his blindfolded horse toward the animal, and as the latter plunged toward him, he turned the side of his steed and the terrible horns of the maddened beast were buried instantly in the wretched creature's quivering flesh. It made no sound, but, tottering a moment, the horse fell with its rider. While a chulo attracted the bull away, others drew the picador from under the horse, uninjured because of its padded clothing, and the horse was beaten with clubs until he got upon his feet again, dripping with blood, was mounted by the same rider and again urged toward the bull. The chulos and picadors thus kept the bull rushing furiously about the arena, until he showed evidence of fatigue, though his rage was constantly heightening. At length the trumpet sounded, and the bandarillos leaped into the ring. Their showy and somewhat tawdry dress does not differ much from that of the chulos, and for a moment we mistook them for these. Each carried, however, a pair of barbs about a foot long, with sharp steel points shaped something like those of an ordinary fish-hook. It was not difficult for one of these banderillos to bring the furious bull dashing upon him. It looked to us novices as if something horrible must happen; but just as the animal seemed about making the fatal stroke he started back, and leaped up and down in an ecstacy of agony. His practiced assailant, in a motion too quick for us to follow, had implanted both the barbs on the top of the creature's neck, at the same time springing lightly to one side. A moment after, when the pain the animal was suffering subsided enough to let him notice another banderillo, he charged again and received exactly the same treatment, to the great delight of the excited audience, and the diverting scene was repeated again, and again. By this time the immense fatigue and bewilderment of the bull were plainly apparent. The trumpet sounded once more and the espada or matador, dressed in a gay, spangled uniform, appeared before the President's place and received formal permission to kill the bull. On the left arm he carried a large red cloak; in the right hand a straight sword. For fear lest the bull might have a little of the early vigor left, the chulos kept it bounding from side to side as at the start. At last the spada and the bull stood face to face, not ten feet apart. By a sudden fling the former spreads the bright cloak from his extended arm; the unreasoning bull dashes through it and the espada is seen to be as safe as a lady playing with her poodle. He toys in this way with the beast a moment or two, then, as its makes one of its unguarded plunges, the sword descends quick like a flash of lightning behind the horns, and buries itself to the hilt in the yielding flesh. A few seconds startled, trembling and the bull rolled over—dead. That was a bull fight as we saw it. There were six other bulls despatched in very much the same way, with admirable promptness. There are no long intermissions. The dead bull and the slaughtered horses are dragged away with some parade; a little sand is thrown over the pools of blood, and the next bull is ushered in without a moment's delay. But to tell of its persecution and death would be to repeat the same story almost word for word.—Correspondence Chicago Inter-Ocean.

SPINNER'S FATHER'S ROMANCE.—General Spinner is of German parentage, although born in New York, and although he is the last person whom, to look at, would suggest anything romantic, yet there hovers over his early childhood and around his parents' career a very charming little love story. His father studied for the priesthood, and entered a monastery with the determination to bid farewell to the world, the flesh, and his satanic majesty. But the trustful blue eyes of a German Madchen looked up bewitchingly at him, between each pater noster, until his beads were forgotten, and glimpses of golden hair and Marguerite's fairness occupied the hours apportioned out for penance and mortification of spirit. It turned out as such affairs almost always do—earthly love conquered the spiritual vows of the devotee, and, to escape the maledictions and persecution of his brotherhood, he married his charmer and came to America, that blessed land of the free and home for such wanderers. And Francis E. Spinner was the eldest born of this love marriage.

Latest Liverpool wheat quotations by telegraph are 8s 11d per cental ex warehouse, average California, a decline of 3d.

There are no new features in local monetary affairs to-day. Until the terrible accident fully detailed elsewhere in our columns, occurred right on the city front, business matters were quite lively and the volume of transactions was as large as the average of the week.

Any changes in the produce market are noted below. The movement in trade circles, which has been brisk during the entire week, was kept up to-day, and we find a manifest feeling of encouragement among business men generally, such as has not been witnessed before during the season. With a better prospect for an abundant harvest than we had even last year, a more favorable condition of the general money market and a more promising market of demand for the productions of Oregon soil than we then had, there is no reason to doubt that a prosperous year is just ahead for our State.

The California Wheat Crop.

All our latest advices from California concur in accounts of the unfavorable outlook for the wheat crop. Farmers have been disappointed at the non-appearance of the rainfall which has been usual during the spring months. The crops are suffering badly in most counties in the State for the want of it, and in many fields there will be almost a total failure. The Stockton Independent, after having made careful inquiry concerning the prospect in the great San Joaquin valley, reluctantly confesses that the "yield of grain will not exceed, if it reaches, one half the quantity promised six weeks ago. The late sown wheat has generally suffered severely and in many places has been rendered lifeless, while portions of that first planted have been badly damaged by the prolonged dry weather and prevailing northwest winds." Less damage was done to the wheat by frost than was supposed. The Independent says: "The wheat in the southern portion of the San Joaquin, Stanislaus, Merced and Fresno counties, while it will, as a general thing, fall far short of what was expected, is believed to be in much better condition than the crops further south." Where summer fallowing has been observed the crops are best—a fact worth knowing to all planters.

A dispatch of the 5th gives a summary statement as follows:

There is a fair prospect in the vicinity of Mount Diablo and on the Calaveras bottom that a good crop will be obtained.

In San Jose valley the crop is very poor on the west side, but in the centre the prospect is better, and well informed parties estimate there will be a half crop. This is better than was at first anticipated.

In the vicinity of Pescadero crops are looking well, they being kept moist by fogs, but in Salinas valley grain is suffering from drought and frost, and half a crop is an extreme estimate.

In the vicinity of Chico there will be, with continued cool weather, full half a crop, which is probably a fair general estimate for the northern portion of Sacramento valley.

Advices from Solano county are more favorable, the grain looking well and will yield a fair crop with a continuance of favorable weather.

San Benito county will have an average harvest.

Advices from Santa Barbara county are quite favorable, and the same may be said more emphatically of Los Angeles.

In San Diego the yield per acre will be less than last year, but an increased area was sown, which will probably give as large a surplus.

In Sonoma county heavy fogs have to a great extent supplemented light rainfall, and prospects are excellent. The same may be said of Napa county.

Reports from San Joaquin county are very bad. In some places on low bottoms there will be a fair yield, but in general not a quarter of a crop will be harvested, and in many places not enough for reed. Grain is being cut for hay.

Miscellaneous.

The circular of Patterson Brothers & Co. gives the stock of flour and wheat in Liverpool at the close of March as follows, as compared with the same date last year:

Flour, sks	123,900	140,900
Flour, bbls	156,800	67,000
Wheat, qrs	324,000	122,600

The Committee of the Bureau Veritas has just made its report for February, 1875. The disasters for the month were as follows: Sailing vessels reported lost, 111. In this number are included 12 sailing vessels reported as missing. Steamers reported lost, 17. In this number are included 5 steamers reported missing.

Home Produce Market.

WHEAT—During the week specially under review the price of this cereal has steadily advanced in this market, and quotations to-day are given at $1 55 per cental—a higher figure than has been reached since the harvest year began. At this rate very few lots are offering, and, as buyers do not seem anxious, transactions are not frequent at all. The predicted short crop in California and some of the northwestern grain growing States has affected the market as much as any other cause, as the European quotations do not justify it by any means.

FLOUR—Stocks here are not excessively large, and most dealers have advanced prices 50 cents per bbl on all brands. Quotations for jobbing lots are $4 50 to $4 75 per bbl for choice extras, $4 25 for outside brands and $3 75 for superfine. Shipments continue quite active, both to San Francisco and northern ports.

OATS—The receipts are declining in volume, and prices are steady at 65 cents per bushel in sacks. Without advising our readers who may be holding, we venture to express an opinion that now is a good time to sell. The demand is fair at quotations.

BARLEY—Transactions are off for the present, no lots being in the market except a few arriving to order; quotations are unchanged and nominal.

MILL FEED—The market is almost bare of most kinds again, and prices are unusually high for the season. We quote middlings, chops, etc., at $27 50@30 ℔ ton; shorts, $22@25; bran at $14@16, and oil-cake meal, $30.

HAY—Considering the progress of the season prices are very steady at $11@12 ℔ ton for good timothy, baled and unbaled.

POTATOES—It seems from the continued full receipts that the fears of a scarcity were unfounded. Prices for all kinds are a little weaker, but choice lots are still held at 75c ℔ bushel.

ONIONS of the old crop are scarcer, and choice lots bring $1 75@2 ℔ 100 lbs.

APPLES, RIPE—But few choice lots are offering, and such are quotable at $1 ℔ box; common, 60@75c; loose lots, mixed and specked, 50c.

APPLES, DRIED—There is no active inquiry, but lots offering are quietly placed at 5@6c ℔ lb.

BACON—Classed under this head are all smoke-cured hog meats, of which there is a small stock of fair, and ample supply of sorry in the market at this time. We quote common country-cured shoulders at 7@8c ℔ lb; sides, 12@12½c ℔ lb; hams, 13½@14c. Sugar-cured held at an advance of 2@4c ℔ lb.

LARD—The supply is fair at 14@15c ℔ lb for choice lots, whether in kegs or tins.

BUTTER—There is a tolerably fair supply of good dairy for the local trade, but receipts are not large. Choice lots are quotable at 30@33c ℔ lb; common, 22@25c.

CHEESE—The supply from State dairies is not large; quotable at 18@20c ℔ lb; demand fair.

EGGS—There is a little more inquiry to day under advices from San Francisco, and prices have advanced to 20c ℔ dozen.

BEEF CATTLE—Live cattle in fair condition are quotable at 2½@3c ℔ lb on foot, or dressed at 5@6c.

DRESSED HOGS—The demand is light; quotable at 6½@6¾c ℔ lb.

MUTTON SHEEP—There is a very fair demand at $3@3 75, for good to choice, per head.

HIDES AND FURS—There is a good trade being carried on by local buyers and shippers. Beef hides are quotable: for choice dry, 16c ℔ lb; green salted 7c; green, 6c; culls, 10@12; elk, 18@20c ℔ lb, deer, 18@35c ℔ lb dried, and 50@75c apiece green; mink skins each, $1a1 50; otter, $2a5; beaver, 75c@$1.

WOOL—It is generally deemed that the outlook is fair for full prices for the spring clip, but as yet there is little doing. To realize the best figure growers should be careful to assort their fleeces and market them in the cleanest condition possible. Maximum quotations are 25c ℔ lb, ranging downward to 20c for choice to good, and 18@20c for common.

EXPORTS.

Ayer's Cathartic Pills,

For all the purposes of a Family Physic,

CURING

Costiveness, Jaundice, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Dysentery, Gout, Stomach and Breath, Erysipelas, Headache, Piles, Rheumatism, Eruptions and Skin Diseases, Biliousness, Liver Complaint, Dropsy, Tetter, Tumors and Salt Rheum, Worms, Gout, Neuralgia, as a Dinner Pill, and Purifying the Blood, are the most congenial purgative yet perfected. Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action; and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every day complaints of every body, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens, send certificates of cures performed and of great benefit they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild as well as effectual. Being sugar coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

Ayer's Ague Cure,

FOR THE SPEEDY RELIEF OF

Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons,

Has been widely used during the last twenty-five years, in the treatment of these distressing diseases, and with such unvarying success that it has gained the reputation of being infallible. The shakes, or chills, once broken by it, do not return, until the disease is contracted again. This has made it an accepted remedy, and trusted specific, for the Fever and Ague of the West, and the Chills and Fever of the South.

Ayers' Ague Cure eradicates the noxious poison from the system, and leaves the patient as well as before the attack. It thoroughly expels the disease, so that no Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dysentery or Debility follow the cure. Indeed, where Disorders of the Liver and Bowels have occurred from Miasmatic Poison, it removes the cause of them and they disappear. Not only is it an effectual cure, but if taken occasionally by patients exposed to malaria it will expel the poison and protect them from attack. Travelers and temporary residents in Fever and Ague localities are thus enabled to defy the disease. The General Debility which is so apt to ensue from continued exposure to Malaria and Miasm has no speedier remedy.

For Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy.

TREATMENT OF THE SOUTH.

A few days since a dispatch brought information of an attempt by the carpet-baggers of the Northern States to influence the policy of Judge Pierrepont in the office of Attorney-General, on whose duties he is about to enter, by declarations that, unless the fanatical course of Attorney-General Williams toward the South should be continued, there would be no Republican vote from the Southern States in the next Electoral College. It is not impossible, we suppose, that the Southern States may go unanimously Democratic in the next Presidential election, but it is impossible that this could be prevented by the prosecution of the extreme measures of last winter, unless the people were simply compelled to vote the Republican ticket by superior force. If nothing like force in carrying the elections is contemplated by these swift advisers of Judge Pierrepont, they certainly must have taken leave of their wits in their anxiety for political power; for how can it be supposed that the people of the South, if left free to vote according to their sentiments, without force or intimidation, would feel more kindly toward the Republican party in proportion as they are more rigorously dealt with by a Republican administration. The proposition needs only to be stated for its fallacy to be seen. Besides, the country has witnessed some of the practical results of the policy of treating the South with extreme severity. The elections last fall told no very gratifying story with respect to the effect of that policy on the popular mind. And yet some of the most objectionable features of that policy had not been developed. Those measures, whose severity and unconstitutionality caused such staunch and leading Republicans as Blaine, Carpenter, Poland, Garfield and many others to array themselves in open opposition to the administration, had not then been brought before Congress. A moment's sober reflection will serve to show how worse than foolish is the idea of using the Republican organization as a mere machine with which to torture the Southern people into voting Republican tickets. The inherent wrong of such a course is not more clearly demonstrable than the certainty that it would inevitably result in the final downfall of the party itself. For every vote secured in the South, by compulsion, two free and patriotic votes would be lost in the North. If the incoming Attorney-General is wise, he will give these extremists a wide berth, and find his advisers among those moderate Republicans, who are Republicans from principle and were such when those who are now making themselves so conspicuous were training in the loco-foco ranks. As Vice-President Wilson said night before last in his serenade speech at Nashville, "the people of the United States should engage now in active prosecution of peace," and endeavor by the cultivation of mutual relations of amity and good will to obliterate as soon as possible the record and memory of the late terrible conflict, instead of keeping open the wounds given and received in the war. Let Judge Pierrepont, let all the administration bear that in mind, and they will restore the Republican party to popular confidence, if that can be done, and if that can not be done, they will at least give to the country peace, repose, rest, opportunity to re-establish their prostrated industries, their commerce, their homes, their family altars. These are more needed now than the ascendancy of any party, and the policy that secures them is the policy that will command the respect and the support of the true Republicans, no matter what party name it goes by, nor by whose hands it is executed.

PRESERVING THE FAME OF CERVANTES.

April 23d was the two hundred and fifty-ninth anniversary of the death of Cervantes, and the Spanish residents of New York city celebrated it in a unique way. There was first a solemn requiem mass at the church of St. Francis Xavier, and then in the evening a grand banquet at the Hoffman House. A little stand prepared for the speakers was graced on one side by a statue of Don Quixote, and on the other by a statue of Sancho Panza, both master and man being in excellent keeping with the idea one forms of them from reading that marvel of fiction in which their deeds are recorded. The Spanish Minister at Washington, the Spanish Consul at New York and other gentlemen delivered addresses, and a member of the Spanish Legation read passages from the works of Cervantes. An original poem was also read in the Spanish language. It seems a little odd that the anniversary of the death of Cervantes instead of that of his birth should be chosen as the day on which to have a festival in honor of his memory. The explanation is, that there is a dispute as to the day of his birth, while all agree as to that of his death.

As will be seen by the report of the proceedings of the Common Council, the nomination of [illegible] Ball to be Police Judge, was not confirmed. We have no idea but that the Councilmen who voted against the confirmation were prompted by a conscientious desire to serve the public, but we can not but think they committed a mistake. Mr. Ball is a young lawyer of good ability, and a gentleman whose integrity is above suspicion. Of course there are other men in the city well qualified for that position, but we do not believe any one of them possesses qualifications superior to those of Mr. Ball.

The commencement exercises of Pacific University, at Forest Grove, will take place the first Wednesday in June. The public exercises of the college societies will be held on the previous evening, and the baccalaureate sermon will be preached on the preceding day by the President, Rev. Dr. Marsh.

The commencement exercises of this institution are always very interesting, the course of instruction being as extensive and thorough as that of any college on the coast.

It appears from the following, which we clip from the Yamhill Reporter, that others as well as we have been examining the Fourth street railway bridge:

THE FOURTH STREET BRIDGE.—From parties who are acquainted with the condition of this structure, we get information confirmatory of the statement we made last week concerning its unsafety, and not only confirming this, but showing that there are several bridges along the line this side of that one that are in as bad condition. Some of our people who have been down and had an opportunity of seeing the bridge declare emphatically, that they will never cross it again on the train so long as it remains in its unsafe condition. Our information is from reliable men whom we can believe, and we are sorry that such a state of affairs exists on the road, for we can all see the disagreeable effect it will have, for it will be a thing to be dreaded until some change is made for the better, which cannot be done any too soon, for the benefit of both the company and the west side communities. We notice that the Bulletin has nothing to say in reference to the matter. Nice guardian of the people's interests and necks!

LIGHT UPON THAT "SENSATION."

IN face of the grave fact that low newspapers of this city have given the account of the event which occurred last Tuesday evening in such a manner as to reflect against me, I feel obliged to make the following statement of the case. I have been for some time past the victim of misrepresentations, originating from a malicious individual that was trying to intrude his insignificant company upon me, and, being repeatedly refused in his ridiculous endeavor, sought for revenge in this manner. As long as I was not directly attacked I thought I could afford to ignore such misrepresentations, for I was perfectly satisfied that anybody who has been more than slightly acquainted with me, particularly my friends, would scorn the very idea of lending their ears to such stories. Nay, more, I was even magnanimous enough to forgive the slanderer when he, some time since, attempted violence upon my person, in the store wherein he is employed as clerk. I say I even forgave that, considering his youth and ignorance, and not wishing to throw him out of employment, and "injure his reputation," but when this outcast of society began to insult me grossly in the open street, running after me and stepping upon my dress, or stopping my way, and on the following day went so far as to use insulting language, in the open street, audible within a block—language which is too low for a lady even to "imagine." My honor would not allow me to stop and reason what steps were best to be taken in order not to make myself liable to a criticism from that ponderous "Evening Journal" which is at present struggling hard enough for its own existence, and will presently have the claimed "public opinion" against itself, if it does not soon learn how to conduct a paper in a more proper shape and manner. I say my honor, in that overwhelming moment of being insulted and disgraced by such "trash," would not stop to reason over these probable consequences, but it told me to take the law into my own hands and inflict the punishment upon the slanderer, which was, alas! only too mild for him.

And now, ye fathers and husbands who have been reported to me as having had the unpleasant task of redressing the many insults and slanders brought upon your wives and daughters by this very scamp in your absence, "you say"—for yours is the public opinion, and not that of an obscure newspaper that is sneaking around your pockets, because their limited capacity do not secure them a success in an honorable, manly way—say you, gentlemen, whether an unprotected, self-dependent, helpless woman, who is trying to earn her livelihood in an honorable way, is to be blamed for defending her good name, the last thing a poor woman can afford to lose, in the quickest and most effective way. Is to be scandalized by such outcasts? And the ladies, my fellow sufferers, who have also been insulted and slandered by this very individual, say you, for you too, are representing public opinion, have I done wrong? I know you must and will say I have not; and I moreover, know that you will be pleased to hear of my determination to punish the next slanderer of my good name in a still more severe and effective manner, that his loathsome lips shall be closed for some time. Respectfully,

MISS A. M. SHEPPARD.

ENGINEER'S STATEMENT.—Since our last issue we have had a conversation with Mr. John V. Smith, who was engineer on the ill-fated steamer Senator when she blew up. In justice to himself, Mr. Smith wishes to make the following statement: "Just before the Senator left her moorings at the O. S. S. Co.'s dock to start for the east-side wharf to take on wood, I examined the pumps (which were then working). I found them in good condition. I next examined the steam and water-gauges and found there was a sufficiency of water in the boiler. When the Senator reached the east-side wharf, and took on a quantity of wood, I again examined the boiler and the pumps, and found everything in good order. I examined the pumps and boiler just before the steamer left the east-side to go up the river and about five minutes before the explosion took place. We left the wharf and steamed up a few minutes before 3 o'clock. As the Senator was nearing the point opposite the foot of Stark street the ferryboat was crossing the river. She signaled for us to keep to the left. The Senator bore off towards the eastern shore in obedience to the signal. A few moments later the steamer Vancouver gave the signal for the Senator to come over and get some freight. In order to make the landing the pilot swung the Senator round in a large circle, the wheel never ceasing its revolutions, but traveling under a full head of steam. The Senator was coming in a quartering direction toward where the Vancouver was moored, and had swung around almost parallel with the wharves. Expecting every instant to hear the signal to shut off steam, I was standing with my hand on the lever which controls the movement of the throttle-valve, for when the vessel swung so far it was necessary to stop going ahead. But the bell did not tap just when I was expecting it, and while thus standing I heard a hissing, roaring sound—like steam escaping. I did not hear any noise, for the engines were working, and never felt the shock. Hearing the noise of escaping steam, I started forward and climbed over the piles of freight which lay between where I was standing and the boiler. By the time I got over I knew at a glance what the matter was." Mr. Smith states positively to us that the boiler was full of water all the time, and that the explosion was not occasioned by want of that necessary element. In his opinion the explosion took place from some unknown and unexplainable agency, the exact nature of which will probably always remain a mystery. An examination of the "fire plug" in the fire box yesterday, reveals the fact that the metal has not been melted, which engineers state would inevitably have been the case had there been no water in the boiler. We cheerfully give Mr. Smith the benefit of his statement, as some persons are disposed to lay the responsibility of the catastrophe to negligence and carelessness on the part of the engineer.

BODIES RECOVERED.

THE BODIES OF CAPTAIN DAN McGILL, GEORGE WARNER, JOHN COSGROVE AND JOHN CROWLEY, RECOVERED FROM THE WRECK OF THE STEAMER "SENATOR"—CORONER'S INQUEST ON THE REMAINS.

Early yesterday morning search was renewed at the dismantled steamer Senator, beached on the eastern shore, for the recovery of the bodies of those who were missing and supposed to have been killed. Owing to the character of the river bank where the boat was stranded on Tuesday afternoon, it was impossible to raise the forward part of the steamer out of the water, so as to enable search to be made with any prospect of success. The bow of the boat was clear above the surface of the water several feet, but the bank sloped down so steep that the other portions of the steamer were deeply submerged. Large quantities of floating debris rendered the search difficult, and considerable time was spent in vainly grappling for the bodies. The fire-box, which had been blown over forward, was found to be a serious obstacle to the search. A large rope was fastened around it, and the end attached to a locomotive. By this means the fire-box was drawn out of the hold and pulled to the forward part of the boat. No sooner was this done than the grapplers succeeded in recovering four bodies of the hapless victims of the explosion, in quick succession. The bodies recovered were those of Capt. Daniel McGill, George Warner, the fireman, John Cosgrove, a deck-hand, and John Crowley, also a deck-hand. Capt. McGill's body was found to have escaped mutilation. There was a small scratch on one cheek, a slight gash reaching from the right eyebrow up and backward across his forehead. The blow which had caused death—perhaps instantaneously—was received on the back of the head, crushing or fracturing the skull. There were unmistakable indications about the face of the dead of a slight scald from steam. The eyelids and cheeks had a reddish, cooked appearance, and imparted a life-like aspect to the features. Just as the body lay on the mattress, the upturned face looked as natural as if Capt. Dan was peacefully slumbering instead of being locked in the rigid embraces of death. There was no look of pain about the face, but every feature was in repose, just as if death had come like a thunderbolt when the mind of the unsuspecting victim was in a state of pleasant composure, and snatched life away without marring or disturbing the expression. In our report of yesterday, we mentioned the circumstance of a man having been blown out into the river some distance from the boat. The person, it was supposed at the time, was Captain McGill, but the place where the body was found proves the supposition to be erroneous. The body was recovered from the hold, immediately below where the pilot house is situated. Captain McGill was at the wheel, conversing with Mr. Felix Evans, at the fatal moment, and he must have been blown up some distance into the air, and descended almost in the same line, back to the deck. The person who was seen struggling in the water, some distance away from the steamer, must have been Mr. J. D. Locey, the purser, as after the most diligent search it has been found impossible to recover the body.

The body of John Crowley was fished up from under the forecastle, where the unfortunate man was engaged in stowing wood away at the time. There were no marks of violence found on his person, and he must have been drowned. The neck and face presented a peculiar, flushed appearance, evidently produced by the steam which was forced into the hold.

The bodies of young Warner and John Cosgrove were found underneath the fire box when it was drawn out. Cosgrove's remains were most horribly mutilated and were beyond identification, so far as their appearance was concerned. The head was blown completely away, nothing remaining but the lobes of the brain, while the arms and legs were crushed to a jelly, and cooked by the hot steam. One leg was twisted clear round, and the white bone of the ankle protruded several inches below the trowsers. It was a sight from which even those possessing the strongest nerves turned away with a shudder.

Young Warner's remains were also terribly mangled. Both legs below the knees, were mashed and twisted; the body was fearfully crushed, while nothing remained of the face but a mass of burned flesh with the jawbones and teeth protruding. It was a painfully sickening spectacle to look upon.

After the four bodies were recovered from their watery beds, they were placed on board the steamer E. N. Cooke, which was lying alongside the wreck. They were placed on mattresses, and carefully covered up with blankets to screen them from the curious gaze of hundreds of persons who visited the scene.

Search in the meantime was made for the body of Mr. Locey, the purser, but without avail. At length it was determined, if possible, to draw the wrecked hull further up on the bank. Strong ropes were fastened to the bow of the submerged craft, and hitched to two locomotives to pull her up higher. A hawser was also thrown out from the Cooke and fastened to the Senator. At a given signal, the two locomotives and the steamer took "a long pull and a strong pull," and succeeded in pulling the wreck considerably further up on the bank. Search was renewed for the body of the purser, but failing to recover it, efforts in that direction were abandoned for the present. There is little doubt but what the mangled remains of poor Locey are lying on the bed of the river.

THE INQUEST.

Coroner Wetmore being notified of the recovery of the bodies, repaired to the east side, and, after summoning a jury, proceeded to hold an inquest. The following persons were summoned to act as jurors: John F. Caples, foreman; S. C. Ritchey, J. L. Atkinson, E. F. Heroy, R. A. White and B. Gaither. Dr. J. B. Pilkington made the required examination of the bodies, and will give at the proper time a written statement of the causes producing death. After one witness was examined, the coroner adjourned the inquiry until 9:30 this morning, when the inquest will be concluded.

In the meantime the bodies were prepared for burial, placed in coffins and given into the hands of friends.

BRIEF NOTES.

The Wallamet is still rising.

R. H. Cox, the actor, is with the Lingards at the Opera House, San Francisco.

There will be preaching at the county hospital on next Sabbath morning at 11 o'clock.

Late last night the postoffice clerks were still at work distributing the large Eastern paper mail received on the steamer.

Mr. W. B. Dillon has returned from California, well contented to take his future chances in Oregon. Miss Ella Dillon has accompanied her father back to Wheeling, Va.

The literary society connected with the Taylor street M. E. church held an interesting session on Wednesday evening. After regular business was over, there was a spell of spelling, dispelling every gloomy spell in the house. Mrs. T. F. Royal bore off the honors of the occasion.

Mr. A. H. Reynolds, of Walla Walla, W. T., is now in the city. Mr. Reynolds came to Oregon in 1851, and has ever since been actively engaged in a prosperous business life. He reports the peach crop as the only one damaged by the cold weather in the Walla Walla valley.

PICNICS.

On next Wednesday, it will be remembered, the fourth annual picnic and excursion of the Improved Order of Red Men will take place. The managing committees are perfecting arrangements to make it surpass all previous affairs of like character given by the Order.

The general committee appointed at the last meeting of the printers, will meet in the composition room of the OREGONIAN at 3 o'clock this afternoon to appoint sub-committees. A full attendance is desired, as the boys want everybody to become thoroughly interested in the forthcoming picnic. Don't fail to attend.

BUSINESS NOTICES.

No sheriff's sale to take place on Monday morning.

Mr. U. Warnekros has removed to 80 Front street, as will be observed by the advertisement.

The stock of saddlery, harness, &c., damaged at the late fire, will be sold cheap for cash at 59 and 61 Front street, by Mr. Samuel Sherlock, who proposes to close it out as early as possible. An excellent opportunity to purchase at low figures is offered.

The Gilder concert troupe leave next Tuesday morning for a trip in the interior of the State.

Miller & Co., 45 First street, are making their new confectionery more attractive daily.

PRESBYTERY OF OREGON AND WASHINGTON TERRITORY.

Evening Session.

The time before the evening service, at which Rev. W. R. Stewart preached, was taken up with hearing the reports of the various churches in response to the question, "Have your people contributed to the boards of the church?"

A very interesting account was given of the workings of the "Denominational County Plan" at Albany, Oregon, where the Presbyterian and Congregational churches are now worshiping together upon an agreed platform, and under the ministrations of one pastor, while yet maintaining their separate identity.

Afternoon Session.

The above subject was resumed at the morning session, and debated for some time with great interest. At the close of the discussion the following action was taken:

Resolved, That this Presbytery strenuously maintain the Communion of Saints of every name "who hold the Head," and thus honor the position always held by our branch of the church universal.

Resolved, That we urge upon our ministers and congregations the unspeakable importance of promoting the union of weak and struggling congregations, upon terms which do not sacrifice any of the essential doctrines of the Gospel.

Resolved, That Rev. A. L. Lindsley, D. D., Rev. W. R. Stewart, Rev. J. Rea, and Elder E. B. Babbitt, be appointed a special committee to visit and correspond with any churches between which and other denominations an organic or co-operative union appears to be advisable.

The church of Pleasant Grove asked leave to supply its own pulpit until the action of the executive committee upon that field is known.

The work of the Bible Society received attention, and the cause was heartily endorsed.

The stated clerk presented the reports of unemployed ministers.

Mr. Nesbit, who has leave to labor outside the bounds of the Presbytery, was reported actively and successfully at work at Mendocino, California.

The work at Seattle, now vacant, was received and committed to the executive committee.

The Presbyterial assessment was changed from 10 cents to 5 cents per capita.

On motion, the Presbytery took a recess until 2 o'clock P. M.

Afternoon Session.

The condition of Albany Collegiate Institute being the order of business, was discussed at some length.

Rev. Dr. Geary, president of the board of trustees, reported on the affairs of the school. He was followed by Mr. R. K. Warren, principal, who urged a greater interest in the institution upon the part of the Presbytery.

In view of the fact that Mr. Warren, president of the college, is the lay delegate to the general assembly, the Presbytery appointed him as its agent to secure, if possible, an endowment for the school during his visit East, cordially recommending him to all to whom he may present the case.

RELIGIOUS INTELLIGENCE.

RELIGIOUS, LOCAL, PERSONAL AND GENERAL.

[From the Sentinel.]

The third Sunday of the month being the festival of Pentecost, there will be no mass at St. John's Church, Milwaukie, as Rev. L. Verhaag will be engaged in the cathedral.

The services at the cathedral for the month of May, we are pleased to notice, are well attended. Every evening the church is thronged with a devout congregation. The blessed Virgin's altar is beautifully decorated, and the hymns rendered by a choir of children's voices adds much to the devotion of the faithful. Services commence on Sundays at 7½ o'clock in the evening, and at 8 o'clock on every other evening.

[From the Advocate.]

On Sunday last, at the Taylor street M. E. church, seven persons were received into church fellowship.

Sunday school concert at the Hall street M. E. church at 2 P. M. next Sunday. The exercises will be varied and interesting.

The Sabbath school at Mount Tabor, two and a half miles beyond East Portland, is doing finely. Dr. S. Nelson is superintendent, and is assisted by Mrs. S. D. Francis. Captain N. D. Gilham is librarian, and Miss Ida Francis, secretary. Seven teachers are engaged, who have under their care about 70 scholars.

Dr. Gatch sends us the following: "You may be interested to learn that Bishop Peck has accepted an invitation to deliver the address to our graduates. He writes: 'I have rearranged my plans so as to be with you on the 24th of June, if God permits. Shall start for Portland by steamer the latest that will afford me a reasonable probability of reaching you in time.'"

CONFERENCE CAMP GROUND.

The following communication, signed S. Mathew, appeared in the P. C. Advocate, with the request for this paper to publish the same:

"Dear Brethren of the Oregon Conference: We have become involved in debt, though not intentionally on the part of the building committee. The tabernacle, in the first place, cost much more than we anticipated, and, in the second place, many agreed to take lots and pay for them in twelve months' time; and they have utterly failed. This enterprise belongs to the Oregon Conference. The Conference gladly received the liberal donation of 40 acres of ground, made by Mr. Holladay; did accept the reports of the Conference committee from year to year, and cannot possibly evade paying the debt created by building the tabernacle that the Conference itself directed to be built, 100x150 feet large. Now it is too late for any of us to complain that the tabernacle is too large, cost too much, or that we are not able to pay for it. The time to protest against it was at the very beginning. If we, as a Church and people, will do our duty, buy lots according to our several abilities; be at the camp-meeting when we possibly can, the debt will soon be paid, and in less than five years we will find it necessary to enlarge the tabernacle. If the people generally, and unitedly, ministers and all, far and near, would take hold of this matter, how much easier, than for a few to bear the burden alone. Let two or three join together and buy a lot when not able to do better.

The railway companies will probably not charge passengers more than $2 for the round trip, to and from the camp-ground, 30 miles or any distance over, as it would be to their interest; for doubtless they would have more than six times as many passengers by this moderate expense of travel. Thus giving people at a distance an equal chance with those near by, they will embrace it; but comparatively few will attend meeting with much of expense. Let the camp-owners consider this matter, and they will make it quite light on camp-meeting folks.

If I am found correct in the above conclusions, our congregations will increase rapidly every year. Come then, all ye people, far and near, let us unite and make this enterprise a living monument that will tell well upon the destiny of future generations.

I would suggest that we hold our next camp-meeting the 1st of next July, in order to secure the labor of our beloved Bishop Peck. This would greatly enlarge the congregation, and give new inspiration to the whole movement.

I hope the chairman of the committee will call a meeting as soon as possible, in order to make arrangements in good season. It will be necessary for all the members to be present; as some deeds are to be made.

The Adelphi Theater has, we understand, changed hands; Mr. Briggs having disposed of his share to Mr. Jos. Bliss, who will hereafter run it upon his own account. Everything will be reorganized. Mr. Cal. Mandeville will assume the stage management from this date. Mr. Bliss has sent to San Francisco for some more performers, and promises everything shall be operated in first-class style.

The clerk then read a communication from the mayor, announcing that the resignation of O. N. Denny had been accepted, filed in the auditor's office, and the office of police judge declared vacant. Upon the vote to concur in the nomination of Chas. A. Ball, the vote stood: Yeas—Councilmen Catlin, Corbett, Story and Thompson—4; noes—Councilmen Besser and Hoyt—2. NATIONAL SURGICAL INSTITUTE.

The Pacific Branch Permanently Established in San Francisco.

Since the first visit of Dr. H. R. Allen (the founder of this National Surgical Institute) to this coast, nearly two years ago, it has been the intention of the Institute to establish a Branch in San Francisco. The subsequent visits of other Surgeons of the Institute, and the unparalleled success which attended them, has served only to strengthen the project. After the expenditure of much time, labor and money in preparing instruments, machinery, etc., the Pacific Branch is at last permanently established, and will be open for the reception of patients by the middle of this month. For the present, and until further notice, the business will be continued at their old building, No. 319 Bush street, between Kearny and Montgomery, San Francisco. The machinery for the Swedish movement and vacuum cure; Galvanic and Electrical apparatus, and for giving the Electro Thermal, Turkish, Vapor and other baths, has all been received from the East, (where it was manufactured in the Institute machine shops), and is rapidly being placed in position. Dr. R. M. Blakie, one of the oldest and most successful surgeons of the Institute, associated with Dr. Thos. Mason and a corps of skilled assistants, are already in San Francisco, and will remain there in charge of the Branch Institute; consequently no further questions need be asked, nor fears apprehended concerning the permanency and proficiency of the Pacific Branch.

Dr. Allen will visit the Institute in San Francisco on the 20th of this month, and remain until the 15th of May following, during which time he will be pleased to see all the old patients now under treatment, and as many new ones as possible. The Institute is especially prepared to treat all Deformities and Surgical cases, Chronic Diseases, etc.

Address National Surgical Institute, 319 Bush street, San Francisco, for circular and particulars.

AMUSEMENTS.

A large and appreciative audience was present last evening at Masonic Hall, on the occasion of the first concert given by Mr. Frank Gilder, assisted by Madame Babcox, Miss Blanche Galton and Mr. Thomas Whiffin. The performance began with one of Mr. Gilder's dashing and brilliant piano solos, "Crispino e la Comare," which was received with prolonged and hearty plaudits. Miss Blanche Galton followed with a pleasing ballad, "The Lady of the Sea," which she rendered in a manner which won for that lady an encore. Miss Galton possesses a clear and musical contralto, voice well modulated and under a good degree of command. "I Know a Maiden Fair to See," a song, was rendered by Mr. Whiffin in capital style. Madame Eugenie Babcock, rendered a grand bolero from "I Vespri Siciliani," (Verdi) and won a hearty encore. That lady has a very charming voice, full of pathos, warmth and expression. Mr. Gilder, next favored the audience with a piano solo, "The Battle Cry of Freedom," with all the variations. "Over the Hawthorn Hedge," a vocal duet, a wierd, old English pastoral song, was rendered with charming effect by Mr. Whiffin and Miss Galton. Part second consisted of a trio, "Memory," by Mesdames Babcox and Galton and Mr. Whiffin, a humorous ballad by Mr. Whiffin, a song: "Love May Come To-morrow," by Madame Babcox, a piano solo by Mr. Gilder, ballad "O, Bay of Dublin," Miss Galton; grand duet from "I Masnadieri," by Madame Babcox and Mr. Whiffin. At the concert to-night there will be an entire change of programme from the one of last evening. A novelty will be introduced in the shape of a violin solo by Mr. Whiffin. Mr. Whiffin made a "hit" in the operatta of "The Blind Beggars," at the theater sometime since, by his violin performance, and he performs a solo to-night by request of many. Mr. Gilder will play several of his most brilliant piano solos, and all of the artists will appear in some of their best selections. At the matinee this afternoon at 2 o'clock, the price of admission will be only 50 cents to all parts of the house. Mr. Gilder will perform four solos.

Spelling matches are all the rage now and there is no telling what may follow to occupy the attention of society. What attracts most attention in the vicinity of Front and Washington streets is the establishment of BECK & WALDMAN. The immense stock of spring and summer clothing, and the marked changes in the matter of charges at this house is sufficient to draw large crowds to their store. Youths' clothing continues a specialty, and fond parents make a great mistake if they fail to examine the stock at Beck & Waldman's.

KOHN, opposite the National Bank, is still busy disposing of those new and exceedingly attractive styles of summer suits. His recent visit to San Francisco gave him an opportunity to make the necessary arrangements for the shipment to his house of the latest and most fashionable suits as they should appear. Everybody who has had any acquaintance with Kohn needs no urging. You need a suit, or some furnishing goods now, and Kohn offers you a splendid chance to buy.

THE BRUTE.

The grasshopper;
He cometh;
He cometh numerously;
He bringeth his family;
Also his relatives,
And his friends.
Likewise his mother-in-law;
As well as all that hate her;
And they are legion;
The wisdom of man computeth them not;
They spread over the land,
And there is no place where they are not.
They nip the springing grass;
They devour the fragrant onion sprout;
And the savory celery.
The wheat field is desolate,
And no green thing remaineth where the hopper hath been.
His pathway is the abomination of desolation.
The ranchmen mourneth for his green fields that were, but are not;
Mayhap he sweareth;
Possibly he saith audibly, and saith aloud—damnoth.
What careth the hopper-grass?
It troubleth him not.
Ask the prophets of Kansas;
And the wise men of Nebraska,
And they will answer likewise;
But the Relief committee agent lifteth up his voice and calleth the hopper Blessed.
The patriarch grasshopper cometh from the mythical western land, where the glorious orb of day sinks in roseate splendor to his evening couch;
The realm of Brigham;
The land of Mormons;
Whence cometh many bad things and some that are good.
The hopper is one of them;
Several of them;
But he is not good.
He cometh in the latter summer days
In sun-darkening myriads;
As the winds come when forests are rended;
As the waves come when navies are stranded;
Like unto a Democratic victory.
He alighted on the potatoe vine;
And on the fragrant tomatoe tree;
And the succulent roasting-ear, whilst it is yet in the milk and toothsome;
And upon all other fruits of the field that cometh late into market;
And they all disappear and are seen after that evil day no more forever.
And the lady grasshopper maketh straightway her nest "down in the cornfield;"
And in the wheat stubble;
And upon the hill-side;
And all over the sandy plain;
And everywhere else under the sun;
And she filleth the nest with eggs;
And then she continueth to make nests and fill them likewise with eggs, every day, until the winter days cometh and the ground freezeth hard, when no grasshoppers can make nests.
And the eggs, are they not ranch eggs?
With double yolks?
Yea, verily, and the warranty is good.
And the lady grasshopper's mate, what of him?
Verily, I say unto you, he sitteth upon the sweet potato vine and singeth all the gladsome summer day;
He climbeth up the corn-stalk and loppeth off its verdant branches;
He taketh no heed for the morrow,
Nor of the groans and curses of the irate ranchman;
And in the hottest autumn days he leadeth the fisherman beside the babbling waters;
And up the steep mountain side;
And over prickly pears;
And through soap-weeds;
And among thorny bushes;
And when at last the fisherman falls upon his knees and puts his hand upon Mr. Hopper, where is he?
Alas he is not there;
But he soareth aloft;
And cracketh his heels together;
And laugheth out of his left optic at the fisherman, who is seated on the hillside,
Digging cactus thorns from his hands and knees,
And framing cuss words.
Alas he will never kneel any more.
And when in the fullness of time, the wintry days have come;
And stilled his voice in death;
With Frost's icy mantle about him, he goeth hence to his fathers,
Content with the fitting close to a well-spent life,
And happy in the reflection that he will live again in his children,
When gentle spring shall come again,
And again,
And again, forever,
In the eternal cycle of returning years.
'Tis SPRING;
Winter hath loosed his icy fetters;
Robin Redbreasts carol in the cottonwood;
The beechertilton trial is well on;
Jenkins busyeth himself writing pardons,
And genial sunshine again bathes the earth.
Are those eggs spoiled?
Not by a jug full.
In the earliest warm sunny days;
Forth come a few millions of the juvenile hoppers;
Tiny, mitey midgets;
The pickets, the scouts, the avant couriers of countless hosts that soon will follow.
Ye "honest ranchman" laugheth in his sleeve, and sayeth;
"The hoppers are hatching; spring frosts and snows will fix them;"
Alas, the fallacy of man's faith;
The little hopper relies on Providence;
And his reliance is sublime;
It putteth the "shoddy" religion of man to shame.
Drown him in floods that would have appalled Noah;
Bury him in Arctic snows;
Subject him to frost that freezeth the ears off a brass monkey;
Encase him in the heart of an iceberg;
Let Old Boreas caress him with Chicago winds, or fondle him in his icy embrace, the little martyr calmly folds his arms, draws up his nether limbs, and waiteth;
Waiteth for the next sunrise, when he cometh forth to breakfast, gay as a schoolgirl, and with an appetite that is a positive luxury.
You can't kill him;
Neither can you scare him;
Nor can he be discouraged;
He dieth only of old age, and very late in the fall.

What the Nervous Require.

What the nervous require more than any thing else is invigoration. Sedatives alone will not cure nervousness. The reason that the nerves are so susceptible is that they are weak. Compensate for this deficiency of strength, and over-acute nervous sensibility disappears. The most rational, wholesome, and agreeable tonic is Hostetter's Stomach Bitters. Medical men recommend its use for the cure of general debility, knowing it to possess strength-giving properties of the highest order, and at the same time to be a means of reforming those bodily irregularities which induce nervousness and loss of vigor. It is the best known remedy for dyspepsia, whether nervous or billious, and is powerfully conservative of a regular habit of body. As it is notorious that those who are afflicted with weak nerves, billousness or constipation, are peculiarly liable to the influence of malaria, it is invaluable to such persons on account of its preventive efficacy. It endows the body with health, and the mind with cheerfulness.

Perfect Health is the best gift of God to man. But it is left to us to keep it good. We commit a serious error whenever we deceive ourselves by not taking in hand at once any disease which may become serious. Coughs, Colds and Bronchitis are of this class. WISTAR'S BALSAM OF WILD CHERRY will cure them.

IMPORTANT.—Indorsed by the Medical profession. DR. WM. HALL'S BALSAM FOR THE LUNGS cures Coughs, Colds, Consumption, and all di[seases] of the Throat and Chest. DR. TOWNSLEY'S TOOTHACHE ANODYNE cures in one MINUTE.

Beerbohm's London and Liverpool wheat telegrams of April 30th, which are about as late as any, give quotations as follows: Floating received, [illegible] ing cargoes, dull; cargoes on passage, very little demand; Mark Lane, quiet; California, off coast, 45s [illegible] and 44s 6d; on passage 44s 6d and 45s. French country markets, mostly turn cheaper. Liverpool white wheat, firmly held; Liverpool reds, dull; California Club, 9s 4d and 9s 8d; do. average, 9s 1d and 9s 5d; Red Western Spring, 8s 5d and 9s.

There is a fair demand for loanable funds now prevalent, but applications come mostly for small sums and individual transactions are by no means large at present. Terms at bank and rates on the street are easier than they were at a corresponding period last spring.

A very brisk state of trade is noticed to-day and shipments to the interior are quite large. The produce market is unchanged since yesterday.

TO IMMIGRANTS.
HOMES FOR SALE.

STRANGER, IF YOU MEAN "BIZ," HAVE A little money and are on the work, we're the identical chaps you have traveled the "plains across" to see. When you say "Home" you strike our strong weakness. Right here, within the sound of the church bells, we have good land for from $25 to $100 per acre. Remember this is within 3 or 4 miles of the Metropolis of Oregon, where people wear store clothes, observe the Sabbath, ride on steamboats and railroads, have spelling schools, with a soil and climate not excelled for vegetables, fruits, cereals, hops, and "ingens," with a cash market, and no fear of drought, curculio, grasshoppers or crickets; no "Spanish grants" to rob you; where we have telegraphic communication with Europe, Asia, Africa and Plymouth Church; where ministers don't have to take summer vacations, for we've got a Brooklyn of our own; and where a Real Estate Agent is given a "wide berth." Yes, if this suits you, and you want to raise fruits, and vegetables, and chickens, and make butter, and WORK, we can fill the bill. True, they are in the rough; but WILL, and MUSCLE, and BRAINS will make Homes of them in the fullest sense. So come right along.

Their effects abundantly show how much they excel all other Pills. They are safe and pleasant to take, but powerful to cure. They purge out the foul humors of the blood; they stimulate the sluggish or disordered organ into action; and they impart health and tone to the whole being. They cure not only the every day complaints of every body, but formidable and dangerous diseases. Most skillful physicians, most eminent clergymen, and our best citizens, send certificates of cures performed and of great benefit they have derived from these Pills. They are the safest and best physic for children, because mild, as well as effectual. Being sugar coated, they are easy to take; and being purely vegetable, they are entirely harmless.

FOR THE SPEEDY RELIEF OF

Fever and Ague, Intermittent Fever, Chill Fever, Remittent Fever, Dumb Ague, Periodical or Bilious Fever, &c., and indeed all the affections which arise from malarious, marsh, or miasmatic poisons.

℞ Has been widely used during the last twenty-five years, in the treatment of these distressing diseases, and with such unvarying success that it has gained the reputation of being infallible. The shakes, or chills, once broken by it, do not return, until the disease is contracted again. This has made it an accepted remedy, and trusted specific, for the Fever and Ague of the West, and the Chills and Fever of the South.

Ayers' Ague Cure eradicates the noxious poison from the system, and leaves the patient as well as before the attack. It thoroughly expels the disease, so that no Liver Complaints, Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Dysentery or Debility follow the cure. Indeed, where Disorders of the Liver and Bowels have occurred from Miasmatic Poison, it removes the cause of them and they disappear. Not only is it an effectual cure, but if taken occasionally by patients exposed to malaria it will expel the poison and protect them from attack. Travelers and temporary residents in Fever and Ague localities are thus enabled to defy the disease. The General Debility which is so apt to ensue from continued exposure to Malaria and Miasm, has no speedier remedy.

For Liver Complaints, it is an excellent remedy.
